Spore is NOT for everyone.

Posted at 7:02 pm under Uncategorized

Yesterday I found out about a new game called Spore when my son asked me to buy it for him. It looked innocent enough at first and has “E for Everyone” ESRB rating. But don’t be mislead, apparently “everyone” means everyone they want to teach evolution to.

This entire game is propaganda aimed directly at our children to teach them evolution instead of creationism, or “intelligent design” if you go for stupid PC terms.

The object of the game is to evolve from a “spore” into demon-like intelligent space creatures that violently take over the galaxy. Such as this one.

I decided that Electronic Arts needs to hear from concerned people such as myself that this sort of game is not acceptable, and created this blog to find support and share information and progress with anyone who feels the same as I do.

Are you retarded?

no seriously are you? only a retard would instantly draw such bizarrely negative responses from such a harmless game.

The creatures are all created and made by the player so how are they demonic in nature when they're made by the player?...if the player WANTS to make a demon he can, he wants to make a fluffy pink fairy he can its up to THEM, what dont you get?

Just whatever, you're a retard, please stop spreading your demented retarded rants.

Signed Concerned Member Of The Public.

PS I dont even like the game, Im just amazed at your idiocy Really?

Thats interesting. Tell me have you played spore through to the space stage and the galaxy center?

IF you had you will know that you play through Evolution on your race.

But once in space its possible for you to create and seed worlds with creatures yourself.

AND then you can force evolution.

YOU become the creator.

Spore in fact does nothing to disprove your personal beliefs more than it does to confirm them.

IT merely is saying that theres no proof in the slightest that God as you would put it is just not a super advanced Alien race.

Most of the (miracles) and facts of the Bible that are so often stated as proof of gods existence IN FACT (if its real) would be easily achieved by a Higher being through higher technology.

(A ALIEN RACE AT LEVEL OF ENERGY MANIPULATION).

At the center of the spore galaxy you will find a creator.

Its a little pink space ship named Steve and it will SUGGEST that it was made by humanity And as such Humans seeded the spore galaxy.

You can then find EARTH in spore. There you will remains of a ancient civilization.

SUGGESTING that we progressed to a point we moved on.

The game is totally ambiguous as to a TRUE Gods existence.

It references how Advanced aliens could claim to be a god (For good and bad).

And how alien races could believe in a god to.

If you wanted to stop looking like a total moron you would take this page down.

You are in fact insulting your God by suggesting that God could not come up with Evolution and some how pre-program it to create US.

Your also being very narrow minded. Are you saying that (IF) another more advanced race made us that we are any less loved by GOD who made them or the race before that made that race?

For real? Seriously? It's a freaking game dude. Do you think your son is going to instantly know how to drive because he played a game where he can? Do you think he's going to run around kicking turtles because he played Super Mario? Are you going to keep him away from any game that allows his character to grow or be customized? On that note, do you allow him to even have any independent thoughts? Or do you just preach words from a book written by crazy people centuries ago?

7. Paustinjon 10 Sep 2008 at 2:27 am 7

What are you so afraid of Admin? Are you afraid that Evolution isn't just a theory? Are you afraid that your belief is wrong? If you're not, why must you so viscusly attack it? Is everything that you don't believe in, wrong?

8. balaamsafeon 10 Sep 2008 at 2:35 am 8

this site is so funny i've bookmarked it. please keep this nonsense up, it makes me smile.

9. GZon 10 Sep 2008 at 2:37 am 9

This entire site is pathetic.

Although you may be right, i bet Will Wright is actually evil to the core, and he was trying to use science when creating this game to corrupt the young generation of gamers.

You know...that, or he just wanted to make an innovative fun game for people to enjoy and be creative.

I can see how those two concepts can be confusing.

You guys have to learn that the whole universe doesn't revolve around your religion alone. It's pathetic.

10. TheMagnificen7on 10 Sep 2008 at 2:38 am 10

Nice, Admin, typical response from a 'believer' who has been bested and has no logical response. You're not fooling anyone.

This is so foolish. I'm utterly embarrassed for you.

12. Evolutionon 10 Sep 2008 at 2:42 am 12

wouldn't this game support creationism, because you "Create" things?
you just heard the word evolution and ran for cover.
The world doesn't revolve around you freaks, get over it.

13. Mikeyon 10 Sep 2008 at 2:43 am 13

Dear Admin...

I had prepared a long and drawn out diatribe on why people can't accept that there will always be people that disagree with whatever you think. However, I just can't seem to type it out. The main thing about Spore is that it's a game. Game. It's not a teaching tool, it's not a class being mandated in your son's school, there will be no lectures on the benevolence of Wil Wright. It's a money making program. All that you are doing is propagating the stereotype that parents are no longer influencing their children's behavior or moral behavior. My son is 7 and he loved the creature creator feature. Would I let him play the game? Absolutely. Would I let him import other creatures from EA's server? NO. Why? Because of idiots like you posted. However, to take the stance that this game is going to determine my son's decision of whether or not there is a god? You've gotta be kidding me. I say, do your part; be informative, ask them questions on what they believe, and let them question you. If you do so, then the child will make up his or her own mind. Isn't that what you want for your children?

14. Aggorton 10 Sep 2008 at 2:46 am 14

I am pretty damn certain this is an elaborate hoax. There are dozens and dozens of Christians who understand this game is fantasy and not an anti-christian game, and they are playing it, I am one of them. This guy gives my religion a horrible name.

15. hrhron 10 Sep 2008 at 2:50 am 15

admin i am not sorry you are so misguided. HAHA

16. Non-Cross loveron 10 Sep 2008 at 2:51 am 16

You guys crack me up saying that this is all EA's fault that this game has this in it.
Let's take a step back and think about this....
Imagine if you gave your kid lego's to build something and they build a naked female.... do you blame the legos company, the mind of the child or the parents???
For those of you who do not want to claim any responsibility, it's your fault, not the company that created the game....
Let's take Play-Dough, since that is a more realistic comparison. You can make the exact same things in Spore as you can with Play-Dough, why are you not upset with the creators of Play-Dough??
Spore gives you a ball of clay and allows you to mold it into anything you want, then it animates it for you via math and complex calculation.....
You have no right to sit here and complain about EA and Spore for creating digital play-dough, perhaps, if you want to keep your children so sheltered, you should talk to them more instead of blaming someone else for giving them the tools to let their imaginations flow digitally.

17. Sarahon 10 Sep 2008 at 2:54 am 17

It's fine if you are personally a creationist, but does that mean you aren't allowed to enjoy a sci-fi movie? Is Planet of the Apes banned in your household? Spore is nothing but entertainment – there is no undercurrent of education. As a creationist you are free to hold your own beliefs, but that doesn't mean you (and your son) can't enjoy the occasional science fiction game or story.

As for the "demon-like" nature of the creatures, it's completely determined by the player. The player has complete control over the appearance of their creature. It's honestly like an elaborate game of make-believe; what child hasn't played with dolls or action figures and "controlled" the figure's world and every move in their mind?

If the content created by other players is offensive, it is easily blocked.

Of course, there's always the option of not buying the game. I also question your judgement in erecting this site, as well. You call Will Wright "evil" and blast him for being a part of a church you don't agree with... but whine when people "aren't nice" to you in comments. A touch hypocritical, wouldn't you agree? Doesn't the Bible also say "judge not lest ye be judged?" You are judging this man on a personal level. If you don't like this game he's created, fine. Don't buy it! But I think your reasons for disliking it are misguided at best, and come across as you being a zealot and insanely judgmental at worst.

18. Andrewon 10 Sep 2008 at 2:55 am 18

ok, i am not going to bash your opinion of this game. but lets be honest here. i am going to assume you are not experience with video games, which is ok.... but how can you argue about something you are not educated about. the purpose of spore is not to teach kids the process of evolution. the purpose of spore is to allow the users to create their own content and share it with others. It is harmless and i really thing you are taking the content of this game too seriously. I myself am a devote christian and sure there are things i take offense to or worry about. Spore is not one of them. As a christian you need to filter what is and is not an attack against christianity. spore is not. so why do you treat it as such? will wright is not evil and has no intention of corrupting children's minds. on the contrary, he wants to give them a chance for creativity. think of it like drawing on paper. you can draw anything you want because you have that freedom. you can choose to draw something bad or you can choose to draw something good. It is art. spore is art. the naked statue of david.... is art and yet you do not protest that. please stop being so single minded and stop looking for stupid reasons to attack anything you deem is against christianity. whatever happened to love they neighbor as thyself? and who are you to judge will wright? it is not your position. only god is the one true judge.

The game is about creating stuff i.e. creationism.

Creationism and evolution are not opposites, and are not mutually exclusive.

26. Lewison 10 Sep 2008 at 3:13 am 26

Your can pray for us, but what would be the point? There is no God in my life just love and people. I don't need to be told how to be good to my fellow man. Last year I raised thousands of pounds for charity and god had nothing to do with it. God is for stupid people who can't think for themselves.

27. ROFLon 10 Sep 2008 at 3:13 am 27

religion & blind faith

"This sort of behavior is left to the psychotic, dogmatic, fundamentalist believers you see on T.V. everyday letting off bombs and killing people in the name of God. Beliefs are dangerous. Beliefs allow the mind to stop functioning. A non-functioning mind is clinically dead. Believe in nothing." -MJK as for spore.....there is no way your going to succeed in bringing this amazing game off the shelves. Making games is an art form now tell me you want to change the constitution in order to make everyone else follow your beliefs....good luck in other countries, we don't need you here.

28. jimcricketon 10 Sep 2008 at 3:14 am 28

I thought this site was funny, and was a clever religious satire page for EA publicity, until i got to the part that said – ‘we must be reminded that the ‘perverted’ Episcopal Church is the only church in america that ordains homosexuals on a regular basis.’ – and then it got less funny. And i realized this is the ramblings of a religious nut, and it’s not funny, just sad. I feel bad for the kid who has this parent.

But it’s ok, his friends from school will burn him a copy of Spore and he’ll be playing in no time – when mom isn’t looking.

29. Coryon 10 Sep 2008 at 3:15 am 29

OH MY GOD! people its a VIDEO GAME! Not like your kids are going to go rebel against the church tomorrow because they learned the truth. Jesus was a carpenter, a celebrity, and a regular man. We evolved, if we didn’t we are all inbred. We could be though, because there is tons of stupidity written on this site. I am going to play a game for entertainment, not educational purposes. Why don’t you stop wasting your breath here and help your religion reach out to those less fortunate. Plus, according to christianity “God created everyone” so doesn’t that mean he created the man behind the video game? By golly I think I’m right. Now go throw your bibles at some other material thing.

30. Solon 10 Sep 2008 at 3:17 am 30

For the record, “Intelligent Design” isnt a PC term, its one directly from philosophy, so..kthxbye

31. anonymooseon 10 Sep 2008 at 3:17 am 31

EA are not attacking your religion, relax. They made a game in which creatures evolve. This is a work of fiction, and does not claim to be reality.

Are you afraid that tomorrow you will wake up and everyone with religion will have suddenly discovered how marvelous the theory of evolution is? It’s not going to happen, so relax.

In any case, what does it matter about other people? As long as you still have your religion you’ll end up in heaven right. Screw the non-believers! God hates the non-believers, as your blog has taught me, so you may as well not waste your time with them.

Or will God become less important to you if you’re the only person in the world who believes?

32. WGSXFrankon 10 Sep 2008 at 3:18 am 32

Admin, you obviously lack the ability to debate, even though you claim on a later entry to be willing to do so.

To debate would require you to actually listen to the person you are “debating” with. Furthermore, it requires you to be able to present evidence supporting your stance as well as the ability to stay on subject.

You failed on every level with your comment to Fairbear.

33. Andrewon 10 Sep 2008 at 3:20 am 33

Either you are joking and not being very funny or you are serious and are completely misguided. (Do you really think displaying the “worst” creations you can find on a public blog is a good way to hide those things from children?)

As for evolution vs creationism in games.....they are games. They are fantasy worlds. They are just as dangerous as day dreams and way more profitable. You should consider funding the development of a Creationism game. The player would be able to create creatures/worlds/environments in an instant. And since they are playing the role of God in the game, they would have the ability to create creatures that look any way they can imagine. (I highly doubt God had a limited palette when he created life.) Wait a second.....I think someone has already made that game. Oh, it’s in the name of this web page. Did you help make it?

Spore is as much about creating something from nothing as it is about changing something that already exists to make it better/faster/stronger(/harder?). I can understand how evolution can be hard to swallow, but at least you can rest easy knowing that this game will let you CREATE a creature that in no way resembles anything before it. That’s creationism if I’ve ever seen it.

On another note, you are right, children will learn evolution from Spore. They will also learn it in grade school, high school, college, and if they are smart, in everyday life. (I’ve read newspapers all my life about the AIDS virus “mutating” and “evolving”.) If you truly want to teach your child Creationism TAKE HIM TO CHURCH or try talking to him. Allowing society to teach your child is irresponsible. We should always work together to raise the best children we can, but I promise you that people will disagree on how we should accomplish that.

I hope your child plays Spore. I hope your child loves Spore. I hope it drives your child to ask you questions. That way you have no choice but to be a parent.

34. funniest site everon 10 Sep 2008 at 3:21 am 34

Best unintentional comedic site ever. I am continually amazed that people can find reasons to cry and complain about forms of entertainment that people aren’t forced to buy. You performed your part and, I’m sure, didn’t buy the (great) game for your son. Yet you have to project and try to influence others. If you want to willingly ignore scientifically proven facts, such as evolution, then that’s your right to ignorance. Why don’t the religious nuts consider maybe their god created evolution?

Seriously, fantastically funny site.

35. Lewison 10 Sep 2008 at 3:22 am 35

I don’t agree with the comment that you make saying teaching evolution to children is wrong. I am an agnostic and am convinced by arguments on both sides (the Watchmaker argument, religious experiences but on the other hand Darwinism and survival of the fittest) of the coin in equal magnitude, but I believe that children should be taught about the theory of evolution in the same way that they are taught about Genesis in the Bible, and the Islam theory of Allah creating the universe and khalifah. It is the same principle; another theory about how Earth was created, it would make theology and ethics redundant otherwise.

36. Rosson 10 Sep 2008 at 3:22 am 36

I'm sorry, but I think you've got this game all wrong.

If the game worked via randomised progression/development of your race based on a selection of useful and fitting parts/traits, then i'd understand how you could label it as 'evolutionist propaganda', but the fact that the player chooses the creature directly goes against it being evolutionist! I could completely change the layout of my creature halfway through the game, which, to me, sounds more like a supernatural being's intervention, rather than evolution taking it's course.

The fact that you can create demonic images is nothing special, people have been able to do that with their hands for millennia. Does that mean God was evolutionist, for giving humans the power to create demonic images?

Tell me, have you even played the game? Or are you just basing it off what you've seen and read online? You know, I can find something on the internet which tells you that it's good to commit suicide whilst taking the lives of many others, is that true too?

For a religion intent on tolerance, you certainly seem determined to ram your beliefs down the throats of anyone who you can, regardless of the validity of your argument. Please, understand that there are people out there who DO NOT believe in creationism. Also, i'd love it if you would construct an argument against me, rather than just saying that 'you will pray for me', it would show that you DO have a coherent argument against the game, rather than just cowering behind religion when faced with a challenge.

37. anonon 10 Sep 2008 at 3:24 am 37

hahaha poor deluded christians. They can complain and pray while everyone else has fun in life 😊

38. Yoshimitsuon 10 Sep 2008 at 3:30 am 38

Okay...

I know that to YOU people, Spore seems an abomination to the belief you so ambitiously follow. That is a fact, and I won't say anything about it. Well, I AM, but that doesn't mean I'm going to be mean about it. I want you to take what I am about to say to heart. The point you have here is that this game is corrupting the idea that God started the world, and that's okay! That's what makes your religion different (to an extent)! But if you think about it...

God, if you believe him or not, if you believe his actions or not, or if you believe that everything that is said about him is true or not, is good. God is good! Remember that this is the 'man' that supposedly created the earth as we know it. We shouldn't argue about that, it's pretty basic. But if God is good, won't he just forget our actions, and love us, forgive us for "sinning", and not believing his "way"? Like I've said countless times before to defend my agnosticism; I can be the most loving, kind, emotional, charity donating, soup kitchen volunteering, respectful, etc. etc. and I could be... an atheist (for sake of argument). If God is truly alive, up in heaven watching us, he would see my actions, my kindness, and openness, and would let me into heaven, wouldn't he? He wouldn't let a soul as 'pure' as mine to burn in the seven pits of hell, would he? Because if he let me go to hell just for not believing in him, I'm sure he wouldn't be so just, would he? Creationism isn't a 'sin', it's an alternative belief for those who weren't satisfied with just having one person create all that we know!

Don't attack us, the agnostics, muslims, atheists, buddhists, Zoroastrians, and in fact, OTHER christians who are okay with this game. Don't censor your child to possibilities, and cherish all ideas, for isn't that what your God taught you?

39. Daveon 10 Sep 2008 at 3:31 am 39

You'd think that a game about influencing evolution would actually be very pro-intelligent design, actually.

goodness me, this is an atrocious advert, i'm yet to find a site where one lonely misguided idiot shares his views on the bible in quite such a way.

And if someone wanted to be prayed for, i'm sure they'd be more than capable of doing it themselves, i've never prayed in my life and, so far, no tragedies have befallen me.

Spend your time on something more productive, like atheism.

thanks for the laugh xx

44. WRU@on 10 Sep 2008 at 3:32 am 44

Unfortunately, you don't seem to realize that there really is no debate when it comes to facts and evidence. Evolution is provable. Creationism is not. Sorry. And yea, Spore is not really about evolution, but it is somewhat about evolution. Just because people have the option to make certain creatures that look like penises and such does not make it not for everybody. Sorry, free speech is like that. Sometimes you see what you don't want to see or hear what you don't want to hear. I guess you guys want to get rid of what you do not want to see, like gays for instance. Sorry, homosexuality occurs in nature in tons of other mammals, and in about the same percentage as in humans. Its natural. But yea, Spore is not a threat to you, but then again any evidence that is contrary to your belief that the earth is six thousand years old is evil and must be dismissed.

45. TheAvengingKneelon 10 Sep 2008 at 3:34 am 45

just because you purposely make an effort for your creatures to look like demons or evil creatures doesn't mean they all do.

the first one of these is an omni-vore(eats meat or plants)

<http://img206.imageshack.us/img206/5329/500037839749lrgvk8.png>

the second is a carnivore(eats meat)

<http://img117.imageshack.us/img117/7432/500038210666lrgqx9.png>

neither of these to are very demon like unless you decide to make creatures look a certain way with the game they wont come out as demons.

maybe you should actually try playing the game, at early stages of the game you can be a herbivore and not kill anything, then once you become more advanced you can use diplomacy or religion as a more peaceful way of progressing through the game.

besides its only a game are you honestly saying that spore is worse for children than Grand Theft Auto.

maybe you should step back and take a reality check before bashing a game, there are far worse things in this day and age than spore most of which your child is exposed to on a daily basis in a public school.

after all this game actually supports both evolution and creationism.

46. anonon 10 Sep 2008 at 3:36 am 46

Wow, you're a douche bag.

47. Alon 10 Sep 2008 at 3:39 am 47

this game doesn't even teach evolution.

it teaches intelligent design – the player is god and changes the creature depending on circumstances

48. Rolfmayoon 10 Sep 2008 at 3:40 am 48

Rofl funniest site i've come across in a good while!

49. Axlon 10 Sep 2008 at 3:40 am 49

The game is not designed to teach anything... the game is meant for users to see whatever they see fit become a virtual reality. This isn't a game that contains some large metaphor for life, or any sort of lesson, or anything like that. It's just a game, plain and simple.

And you aren't forced to “violently take over the galaxy”. You can just as easily become allies with all other lifeforms in the universe to make your way through the game.

I can understand if you're concerned, but this is a game, and nothing more. It's not going to horribly corrupt your children by sparking their imagination. And please, if you respond to this, admin, do not bring in any kind of Jack Thompson/Grand Theft Auto/other random video game and violence related story into the conversation. There is no concrete evidence that video games can be directly correlated to real life violence. Anyone that performs an act of violence and blames it on a video game is mentally unstable and cannot be taken seriously until they have been helped. Anyone that thinks video games can lead to real life violence is entitled to that opinion, but they have no clear evidence to support themselves.

It's people like you, Admin, that give religion a bad name. if god were god, if god created our world and everything in it, then in turn everything we create is possible because god put it there. spore is.... just.... a.... GAME. it's fiction, it never claims to be fact, it never claims to be history, not once did it say "this is how the world works, up yours religion!".

no, it never said that. it's a valid a form of history or theory as the teenage mutant ninja turtles is to Biology. it's fiction. and you say this game is about evolution!? its creationism! you yourself are the creator in this game. you give the thing arms, you give it eyes, it doesn't develop over time, you put the pieces there. if it was evolution you would have to crawl around and adapt to your surroundings a different way. like if you likes to bite things, your creature would slowly grow teeth. but that isn't how the game works. you get parts, you decide "I wanna make a carnivor" so you put on one of the choices you have for carnivor mouths. that, my poor deluded friend, is creationism and intellegent design, not evolution.

Maybe you should figure out each things definition before you rant on about something you probably never played, or even really looked into. instead you look up things wrong with it. if you look for something bad, of course your going to find it. guys make penis's in it, they make boobs in it. but its not the games fault, and they get banned for it. if I bought a piece of paper and drew a penis on it, is it the paper companies fault? is it the pencil companies fault? no. it's the creators fault. but unlike a piece of paper I can post anywhere, these creations can and are banned from the online community so no one will have to run into them.

please, I respect your beliefs and religion. but look up, research and learn before you rant on about something you don't even understand.

57. nighton 10 Sep 2008 at 3:49 am 57

dude, xou are the best example on (of? (hrm foreign languages..)) close-mindedness.

"The object of the game is to evolve from a "spore" into demon-like intelligent space creatures [...]"

The object is to create a fictional race that evolves from a spore an inteligent creature that the player designs himself. Sure, you obviously can design scary creatures if thats what you want, but calling this the "object of the game" is a lie.

"[...] that violently take over the galaxy."

That take over the galaxy by military OR diplomatic OR (shock!) religios means.

Dude, if you want to burn something intellectually at least get your facts right.

Guys like you piss me off. I couldnt care less about your religiousness, but you actually are trying to critisize something you dont know anything about but the few things you want to know, things that fit your "this games is pure evil" agenda. Its sad that you are content with not knowing and passing judgement nonetheless. If you would talk along the facts it would be one thing, but anyone that knows anything about this game would at least be able to call bull onthis post as itis clearly uninformed.

The irony of this site is pretty classic. "Protect our children from the evil that is video games that they can choose to play" is funny enough, but to have ads for "Bite Fight" right next to it is even better. "Go out to hunt and satisfy your thirst!" Hypocrisy win!

64. Meon 10 Sep 2008 at 3:53 am 64

I applaud you for using your freedom of speech to voice your concerns... however, I am also just as free to play this game, and enjoy it for what it is. Whether or not I believe in God and Creationism is irrelevant – anyone whose beliefs are strong, and truly believe them to be correct, while not be swayed by a video game. For being so religious, you seem to be quite afraid of this game. What does that indicate? That your beliefs are not, in fact, unshakeable, and that a little science knocks the foundation out from under them.

Enjoy your time on this planet, I personally will continue enjoying Spore. I only wish you could do the same. Don't bother praying for me, I already know I am a good person and will enjoy my afterlife, no matter what it turns out to be.

Why are you taking all this offense to a simple videogame? The gaming industry is not about 'poisoning the minds of our children', just about people enjoying themselves in life. Just because you Christians – or any religious types for that matter – use the thought of an almighty deity as an explanation for everything and a cover for your innermost fears of the pointlessness of existence, lack of a true good or evil, lack of consciousness, memory or any form of your being after death and hopes that there is always someone there to help, defend and support you, who will always succeed. The Bible has been disproved so many times that any belief in it remaining is just foolish false hope – is the universe made up of a series of crystal spheres? No, we've already sent probes all through our solar system. Is Earth the center of the universe which everything revolves around? No, other planets have moons, we orbit a star and are in fact moving away from most galaxies. The Bible has been changed many times before; for instance the 'Number of the Beast' is at the moment 666, earlier in time it has been found as 665 and mostly 616. Believe what you want, just don't make it your most precious thing in life, don't try to bring it into matters that have nothing to do with it and try this thought out: Are you protecting your children from other people's ideals and philosophies, or are you yourselves brainwashing them into believing what you say, without allowing them to make their own minds up with the given evidence from both sides?

oh man, i should have read the other comments (including yours ) on the post before commenting, i would have seen that it is pointless.

you actually start a blog to discredit a company/game/individual/group of individuals (spore-players in this case) based on an obvious lack of knowledge on the topic you are writing about and when someone actually tries to engage you in a discussion about the very topic you just call him/her misguided, play the "i'll pray for you"-discussion killer and dont even respond in any way to what he said? this could have actually turned to be a theological discussion in which you might have convinced someone about the truth of your belief and in stead you blow him off with this age old non-rhetoric? man you are more sad than i thought after just reading your initial blogpost.

71. Concerned Gameron 10 Sep 2008 at 3:58 am 71

I just wanted to point out that games are rated on a basis of violence (realistic, not mario type) and maturity. As far as I know, and I haven't played the game, and probably won't (console gamer), the themes in spore, though supporting evolution, do not explicitly contradict any religion, though maybe some ideals.

There is no overly mature content, from what I've heard (which is a bit limited), but if the ESRB had to take religion into account, almost every game would have some flaw with some religion. If you feel the need to start up a website describing whether a game is Christianity friendly or not, that's up to you (and not a bad idea); but the general public understand that games are not meant to be taken on a theological level, and don't worry about possible insinuations. I have a good friend who is a creationist, but he is excited to play Spore because he doesn't care about whatever theories the game supports, he just wants to enjoy a well constructed game. I'm sure his position on the matter will not change, and neither will any sensible person.

72. Larryon 10 Sep 2008 at 3:59 am 72

seriously, i find it funny that you only just now heard about this game. it's been in the mainstream gaming world for the past 3 years. How did you find out about the game only just recently? After reading through you're whole blog, i realize that you havent really had a chance to actually look at all the elements of the game, only the creature creator. Take a step back from your stance and actually play the game first from beginning to end before making assumptions on something. Assumptions are one of the causes of the Iraq war going on right now and we all know how well that's going.

73. anonymouson 10 Sep 2008 at 4:01 am 73

Okay there is nothing wrong with Spore.

It doesn't teach you ANYTHING.

Why?

Because YOU are the one at the controls.

That's right, you can make normal creatures or even things that resemble real animals, and YES-you can make "Sporn". But all of this depends on the creator, and I doubt your child would create such content.

Also, you can simply play through the game with your cute creation befriending everyone along the way and establishing friendly trade alliances with neighboring planets. The only way you have to create a universal holocaust is if the PLAYER wants to do that.

So let me conclude; Spore is a game that provides a harmless fun time controlling imaginary creatures that you can change as time passes (Pokemon, anyone?) and throughout the game you are always making choices of how you interact. I am sure your son would enjoy the experience and I suggest you read more into the story before taking such a bold stance against something you clearly don't comprehend.

74. Lauraon 10 Sep 2008 at 4:01 am 74

Honestly, I KNOW that the good Lord put all the things here on this green earth, so the contents of this fictional video game don't offend me. I think you must doubt God, throwing such a big hissy fit over some children's game, just because it uses the science fiction of aliens and other planets and evolution.

And if you think it'll waver your son you must not be a very good parent. I would definitely let my kids play this game if they wanted—they know full well it's all fictional and for fun. My kids KNOW they came straight from God and not from monkeys.

I'd monitor them, of course. Since this game involves online play and other people. Something you should be doing, too, if you were a good parent.

75. AmusedPaganon 10 Sep 2008 at 4:01 am 75

Look, anyone who has issues with this game has no inner child, and I pity them. EA is not "attacking" Christians or your values. It's merely a video game. Everyone has the right to entertain themselves, and if I want to buy an "inappropriate" game and play it, that's my own damned business. And it isn't your place to tell me or anyone else otherwise. Look, I'm sorry if your child may have made a creature in Spore look offensive in some way, but that is your problem, not anyone else's. So, where do you come off telling people what is and is not right for them or their children? So why don't you get down off your high-horse and stop telling people what they should believe. If I think my child could play this game with no issues, than I am going to allow my children to play it. And you aren't going to tell me otherwise. And I'll be damned if you tell me I'd be a bad parent for doing so. As for the whole "creation v.s. evolution" issue, isn't it getting old? I certainly don't care, and I'm more than certain that I'm not the only person who is sleeping well at night not caring about the issue. It doesn't matter whether or not our universe was created or it evolved. We weren't there to witness it, so why don't we just leave it alone? I think we all would be better off without the never-ending debates about everyone's theories behind the questions that we don't know the answers to. Believe what you will, but don't push your beliefs onto others who don't wanna hear about it. So, why don't you chill out and lighten up so you can enjoy the things that are meant to be fun. Have you played Spore? I wouldn't be so quick to judge the game until you've played it.

76. Konradon 10 Sep 2008 at 4:01 am 76

Could you tell him why he is misguided?

I can't believe you call this "evolutionist" propaganda, I can't even believe you'd actually go crazy over such a little game. I guess some extremists and paranoids see issues where there are none at all. You do know Evolution is taught at school right?

If you want to be one of those retarded creationist morons, that don't believe in science (and by the way, I'd say the propaganda is more on the one who has NO ACTUAL PROOF OF WTF HE CLAIMS, than on the one that tries to be rational and logical. Either way you're being way too serious about nothing. The way you educate your kids will always be stronger than the way school or video games do. As a creationist freak, you don't even have anything to worry about; I mean besides making your kids become like you and go on crazy rants BAWWWWWing about absolutely nothing.

I guess they have fucking sick zealous extremists everywhere, and on BOTH sides, including the religious one. Being overzealous and intolerant isn't very catholic.

Ok, all crazyness on a stick.

Either way, you're kind of people "admin" is what got me into becoming an Atheist. You all think that your so called GOD made everything. Truth is, GOD didn't do anything, he's a fairy-tale made up by people that wanted to find a reason to wage war upon others. At one point in time, you could say "In the name of God, I smithe thee!" and stab someone in the heart, just you didn't like the guy. But because you said the "Divine" phrase before doing so, you were cleansed of your sin.

Idiocy, thats what I think about it. Ok, here is a fastball for ya: if god exists, why is there world hunger? Why is there disease? Why can't we bring back the dead? Even better, why do we die? In the scriptures (I used to have one until I figured out it kept my stove working a lot longer) it says that god loves every single human, and treats them as equals, well then, why do the young children of Africa die of hunger, and why do the young children of America die of being too fat? I do not see an equality in this.

My conclusion: It is even more likely that a Giganotosaurus crawls out of my ass, asks me for a cup of tea and then dissapears again, than that god exists. (notice, I hate the whole "write god with capital thing") You actually sound like Sheila Brovlovski, a character of South Park... you don't hate Canadians do you? -_-'

Fairbear, I'm sorry you're a blathering fool. This is a video game! No one cares about the creationism issue. This game is not given out with tax dollars; it's not used in schools, and it certainly has no government label on it that cites support. There is no "propoganda"; there is entertainment.

Admin, I'm sorry you are so misguided. Why can't you be content in the fact that this game requires someone to create life instead of mindless kill things? Whether or not you believe in evolution does not mean your child should not learn about it and make his/her own choice. God gave us all free will, not just you. Let your child use his and either faith or science will guide him, and as long as he's not raping children, does it really matter what games he plays? I am absolutely disgusted that an American adult can be so uneducated, arrogant and, most of all, oppressive. If you had simply stated that this game was inappropriate for children because of scenes that could be deemed sexual, then most would agree, but now you think religion should be regulated in some manner, as if only mature adults really understand God. As far as I'm concerned, by your argument (sex scenes notwithstanding) children should not be allowed to go to church because they are not capable of making the decision of what to believe just yet.

86. Offlinkon 10 Sep 2008 at 4:08 am 86

Please, admin, tell me. If someone made a game, illustrating the theories that you thoroughly believe in, and I do not, should this game be labeled inappropriate because we disagree on the matter? Should I assume the game is trying to propagate my children's heads with things I don't believe are true?

You interpret the bible as written fact. I see it as a non-literal set of tales, a guideline on how to live our lives. Both of us live lives influenced by the messages it preaches. Why should it matter whether we believe in a god or the fact that he may or may not have created the universe we live in?

While Will Wright does not know for certain that evolution is true, he believes in the theory. No one can be sure of what or who created the universe, no matter how hard either a theist believes or an atheist refuses to believe. This game is not an attack on creationism, it's a different way of looking at the theory of evolution that's new and interesting; a way to understand how our species may have developed, and how all different beings in the universe may exist. It does, however, treat evolution as what it truly is – a theory. Never does it once present itself as fact; it only bases itself upon the theoretical concept of evolution. If you want your children to be closed-minded, go ahead and censor their thoughts. But, if you want them to grow up to be broad-minded thinkers, capable of being rich thinkers and intellectual people, open their minds. Let them decide for themselves what they want to believe. They most certainly may not be old or mature enough yet, but once they mature to the point where they can independently make that decision, they'll want to make it for themselves. Please allow them.

For 15 years of my life I was raised as a Catholic. Yes that's right CATHOLIC!! The most hardcore of ALL CHRISTIAN SECTS!!! And after 12 years of Catholic schooling what did I learn? I learned that Jesus was a good man that tried to spread happiness to those who lived in such a terrible time of persecution and torment. In the end Jesus just wanted his people to be happy, and after reading what you wrote I can easily say you are not a happy person.

People with happiness in their lives embrace the positives of our world, they don't hamper upon the negatives. And what's even more sad is that THERE ARE ACTUALLY WORSE THINGS IN THIS WORLD THAN SPORE YOU PATHETIC MISGUIDED FUCK!!! Much MUCH worse things. Turn on the news for a second and maybe you'll see. Don't pray for ANYBODY when you can't even think for yourself. You said you have a child well than be happy that your child is healthy, that they were born in a wealthy country and that they don't have to fear for their lives when they go outside. Hell you should be happy for those things for yourself.

Do you seriously still live in the Dark Ages where you are not allowed to question your religion AND everybody that does is going to hell. 2008!!! THAT'S THE YEAR!!! GET WITH THE PROGRAM!!! We now know that some WHITE BEARDED MAN WEARING A PALE SILK ROBE CREATED A MAN AND A WOMAN WITH LEAVES ON THEIR CROTCHES AND SAID "HEY MAKE BABIES DON'T EAT FROM THAT TREE!!!" DOESN'T ACTUALLY EXIST!!! God, Zeus, Buddah, Allah, whatever higher power there is I'm not saying doesn't exist but at this point we know there is no Adam or Eve. I believe there is no higher power that we as humans know about but I would never say they don't exist because those are my beliefs and I'm intelligent enough to know that forcing one's beliefs on anybody else WRONG!!!

I am a 20 year old male HOMOSEXUAL!! Yes quite a HEATHEN AYE!!! But in the end at least I am happy, love my family and my friends as they love me and I will live a happy life even knowing that people will hate me for being me. If I am a sinner for being happy and living I will sure as fuck spend the rest of eternity in your fear giving HELL so as long as I can be me.

Oh and I never played spore, I'm waiting for Fable 2. A game with same sex marriage and magic!!! 😊

There are many problems with your post.

First, you don't create a "demon" creature. You simply design whatever you wish to choose. A carnivore, or an herbivore.

Then, you evolve your cellular creature to a land walking creature, where again, you choose how you want to play, via carnivore or herbivore. You choose to fight and make other creatures extinct, or charm them and become allies.

Further on, you go to the tribal stage, where you can either fight the other tribes and take them over, or you can play music for them, and become friends, very similar to the last stage.

Next to last, you come to the civilization stage, where you can become an economic state, a military state, or a religious state. You choose your path, and do what you want to do.

Finally, you come to the Space stage, where you can do whatever you please. You started that you "evolve from a "spore" into demon-like intelligent space creatures that violently take over the galaxy"

While that IS an option, it's by no means required. You can become friends with other civilizations you meet, and never once go to war.

This game is all about choice. You are never forced into one path or another.

All I ask is you please fact check before you post things that are obviously not true. It only makes you look foolish, and hurts your credibility.

91. NoeNameon 10 Sep 2008 at 4:18 am 91

I am deeply saddened by how narrow minded people can be. What is wrong with wanting to be creative or questioning the things around you?

Video games are meant to be an avenue for exploration and artistic vision. On the opposite end, although I personally don't find the 'tasteful' creations entertaining, it is a parents job to censor and guide what their children interact with. That is why there are parent controls, your eyes and brain; for research and intelligent decisions.

People need to stop taking the media so seriously. There were the murders and 'demonic' creatures imagined far before video games and television were even created.

Put your time and energy into something more worth while instead of complaining about a video game. There are far worse things out there.

92. Dr. Houseon 10 Sep 2008 at 4:19 am 92

You people believe that a 'god' created us and gave us what is known as 'Free Will', now the thing about free will is that it allows us to essentially do what we will. However there are certain ethics and moral guidelines that we adhere to because of society, nevertheless free will exists; whether 'God-given' or evolved is irrelevant to this point.

It gives us the right to believe what we want to believe, to do what we want, and most importantly, to make our own decisions about life. Spore was designed and created by people who 'god' has given free will to and its intention is to entertain because it is a game, if I need to define 'game' then this reply is probably pointless.

What is it about Spore that seems to enrage you so much? All the game does is show evolution, it is in no way telling people that there is no 'god' or that this is how humans came into existence. I for one do believe in evolution but that does not mean that I dismiss your views as wrong, nor do I slander your beliefs.

People who will play this game will understand that it is a game and it will not affect their beliefs.

Admin, you claim this is propaganda but isn't, it is freedom of speech, it is the result of free will which has been given, as you believe, by 'god'. Also by not allowing your son to see the world for itself and see the views of other people, you are indoctrinating him to your beliefs instead of allowing him the free will to decide for himself what he wishes to believe.

93. gameron 10 Sep 2008 at 4:19 am 93

Why do you simply dismiss Fairbear as misguided instead of counterring his arguments with logical discussion? Your sympathy, whether real or feigned, is condescending, and outright meanspirited in regards to Fairbear's legitimate and earnest arguments. As a Christian person who has accepted Jesus Christ as his Savior, I see no problem with this game, because I am able to separate fantasy from reality. I urge you to re-evaluate your harsh criticisms of this game, because honestly, there are bigger problems in the world than just a videogame. Even if you can't agree that this game is harmless (as is your right), I implore you to at least redirect all your energy to a bigger issue, such as the recent hurricanes, the presidential election, the genocide in Darfur, or the Soviet occupation of Georgia. Thank you for your time.

I love when Creationists can't defend themselves. They always pull the "I feel so sorry for you. You're so misguided and lost. I'll pray for you." bullshit. You know what, we don't want or need your prayers. You made a comment:

"I am not afraid of a debate. I just wish they would be a little nicer. But I understand that some people get pretty defensive when they know they are wrong."

It looks like you aren't afraid of debate because you never do it. When you say things like this you aren't opening the lines of communication. You aren't asking people for debate, you're asking people to come down on you like a ton of bricks. Which they are starting to do. Maybe if you had some intelligent rebuttles you might gain a bit more respect from the rest of us. Your ignorance is blinding.

Admin, calling firebear misguided.... the church did that with the idea that the earth wasnt the centre of the universe. It changed its mind when in the old testament it said that long hair was a sin, and that touching the skin of a pig made you unclean and immoral...

All you do by not being open to extreme possibilities is setting back the progress of not only your religion, but our race, and our chance to develop and fulfil gods plan, or his purpose, or whatever it is we are meant to be doing here...

I highly recommend you get your son spore for his birthday or for Christmas, very harmless game that will teach your children how to be more open minded, will show him that there is always more than one way to solve problems, violence is never necessary, and will put his creativity working.

A++ game, playing it right now.

I would really like to know why you believe Spore is attacking your faith.

Its a game, its a form of entertainment.

Do you go down to the movie theater and yell at them for making movies like The Incredible Hulk because it's fake?

You're really just being an ass about this whole this, if you don't agree with it then don't get the game and dont let your children(if you have them) play it, its that simple. (Or you could just explain why you believe its wrong but you dont seem like the person who would take that approach)

Your purposely provoking people and then being passive agressive in response acting like your perfect. Example:

"But I understand that some people get pretty defensive when they know they are wrong."

"if you go for stupid PC terms."

That isn't debate in any way shape or form, that's just an insult. You're just putting other people down because they're different and that upsets you.

Why is it that you can't simply tell your son that its merely a game and get on with your life? If you as as strong in your faith as you appear to be there shouldn't be any reason for you to lash out like this. Are you seriously afraid that EA is attempting to convert your son? I'm willing to bet if you do some research youll find that there are plenty of Christians at EA.

Feel free to email me a response. Please don't be aggressive or Im not going to bother to respond. Jgp\_117@hotmail.com

Nobody so far has addressed this, but Spore does NOT promote evolution. It doesn't promote Creationism either. Its a kind of neutral. Although it definently ecourages evolution and science, because thats how you progress through the game, it also encourages Creationism. How you ask? Well, You design your own civization. YOU are the intelligent designer. And there isn't just 'sex-demons' and 'penis-beasts,' those are just made by people with a wierd sense of humor. All of the user-created creatures imported in the game are filtered by EA. You should be ashamed of yourself for putting that phallus-monster on this page. I'll just go back to creating my non-descript goat-yak creature.

I really did had a good laugh about this. I posted it in our irc channel, we all made fun of you. But hey, you can believe what ever you want.

It still doesn't chance that Spore is a harmless game. Ill even go to the length of proving it to you.

Lets start with something simple. Take for example crayons, you know, the stuff you probably used as a child to draw houses, cars maybe even some horses on some field. You might have drawn a pretty little rainbow above it all. Isn't it nice with crayons?

So if you gave it to your child, he would paint stuff he knows, stuff he probably have heard you talking about. Pretty things. Because we don't want to corrupt him now, do we?

Ok, now give the crayons them to an adult person, or maybe it doesn't even have to be an adult, maybe just a youngster, someone with a little bit more knowledge of the world. Someone who do in fact know what sex is, and know what you personally call inappropriate for children. Now this person he will probably start drawing something nice, some house maybe, a self portrait, maybe a nice looking car, even something more advanced with lots and lots of details. But then.. he might not.

He might draw a person with a penis sticking out of his forehead.

So then I ask you. Is the crayon to blame for the penis-forehead-picture or is the person that drew it to blame.

According to this site and the posts you have made here, it is the crayon and the paper. Apparently you think this is ok.

I will have do disagree.

A world where people can do what they want as long as they are contributing members of society, abiding by the law, is apparently something you are against.

Have you ever tried LSD? I think that is the only solution to your problems, since with LSD you can live entirely in a fantasy world where you have power over everything.

111. Samon 10 Sep 2008 at 4:53 am 111

Everybody is entitled to their own opinion.
I would've thought you would be happy with Spore. It portrays evolution (which you've lead me to believe is heresy or somesuch in your eyes) in a cartoony, non-immersive style. Would this not agree with your stance of not teaching children about evolution? For all i can see, it could be making a mockery of the evolution and mutation theories. Surely your divine being (whichever he is, there are too many in the information age) intended this game to be created? No, it isn't a test of faith, no you don't need to declare it as the work of an evil entity, and yes, adults with imaginary friends should seek help urgently.
That or start a crusade. Seriously cover a motorbike in the 1200's style red on white crosses and ride into EA's headquarters. It would raise eyebrows.

112. blahon 10 Sep 2008 at 4:55 am 112

If you don't think this game is appropriate for your son then don't get it for him. There are plenty of other games out there to choose from. You may not agree with them all, but then again who does? Find a different game if he still wants one and spore may be quickly forgotten.

114. Tenkon 10 Sep 2008 at 5:04 am 114

It isn't evolution — it's much closer to Intelligent Design (where the player is the designer). It doesn't contain any evolution: Evolution is a specific thing where genes get propagated through random mutation and weeding out the genes that are worse at being propagated. Just having creatures change from cells to mammals to sentient beings is not evolution.

Dear Admin,

I'm a Christian, and let me just say, I love this game.

First off, EA is taking all possible measures to prevent penis-creatures and the like. That's the creature's creator's fault, not EA's.

Just wanted to get that out of the way before I move on to the main point:

Think about this:

What are the chances of the Big Bang happening in the first place?

What are the chances of the only planet being able to support life actually getting it?

What are the chances of evolution following through so that we are intellectually superior to animals?

What if God loaded the dice?

I restate: I am a Christian.

I do believe in evolution, but I also believe that god influenced it greatly if not entirely. I believe God has gone through with all the miracles stated in the Bible, but I believe there is a scientific explanation for each and every one of them. I believe that those miracles would be amazingly difficult, if even possible, to go through with on our own. I believe Spore is a wonderful game, and Will Wright is a genius.

117. A Player of Sporeon 10 Sep 2008 at 5:12 am 117

This is funny, really. I love how people like you enjoy pretending that there are actually bible belting bastards this bad out there in the world. I mean, wouldn't it be absurd for someone to actually agree with all this? It would, right? Right?

I hate you, America.

118. dauidon 10 Sep 2008 at 5:12 am 118

I completely agree, this game is all about creativity and using your imagination, also, it has been scientifically proven (more than a century ago) that creationism is natural. Also, how is watching some strange naked creature dance around and watching monkeys on the discovery channel do it (also, they poo in their hands and throw it at each other, how is that ok?)

121. Mightydickon 10 Sep 2008 at 5:16 am 121

I don't think I've ever laughed harder at the sheer mind numbing stupidity of a video game review (I use this word lightly).

I agree though, what they should do with this nudity (or at least pixels forming body parts, that you consider to be "offensive") is embrace this, put a shit load of violence into spore, and release the game as a M game.

122. Scotton 10 Sep 2008 at 5:17 am 122

Im a Christian too and i understand where you are coming from, but its ridiculous to be SO defensive over a SANDBOX videogame.

You do realise that the PLAYER creates the beings in STAGES, much like theistic evolution. This game does in no way undermine God. It does not deal with creation theory such as the Big bang or otherwise, it simply is a game that at the most, teaches how creatures can adapt over time, only at an elevated level. Much like an ostrich and a penguin and a eagle are all still birds, they are all different and adapted to their environments. This is simply a sandbox, where the PLAYER designs who they want. They can play the entire game in peace and use democracy with every other race of creature, they never need to *kill* anyone, they are all CHOICES and part of FREE WILL. Free will in its own right is what makes us important, as true love without free will is impossible.

Secondly what do demons look like anyway? Have you seen one?

It just seems like this is WAY overboard for something as trivial as one videogame in which the player can do as they please. Surely it would be more sensible to speak against games such as Grand Theft Auto or something which require violence to progress.

Regardless, i doubt you'll change your views but atleast ive tried to help you understand.

123. Anonymouson 10 Sep 2008 at 5:17 am 123

If god is the alpha and the omega, the begining and the end, knows what has passed and what is to come, like it states in the bible, why do people pray and think it will make any difference?

124. Lulz and Seriousness 10 Sep 2008 at 5:24 am 124

This site is by far the most epic site evar. If i could sum up this site, in Spore, antispore.com is the equivalent of the religious civilization, conquering cities by making its populous less happy. Dude seriously, its a video game where one person can create something and watch it grow over time, the original idea. Its not Will Wright's fault that the human race is so fucked up that we create disgusting and grotesque creatures with this game. However, Will Wright assumed (like most people) that such things would happened to his game, but made it anyway. Good luck with this venture, but remember to keep an open mind for the new and unusual, it just might bring the better.

the only reason their r people making porn with this is because thay can, it is their opinion what to make, and u do not have to make it.

I will not go into evolution vs. creationism because i may offend some people. but all i am goin to say is that i believe a little of both and this is no way offending my religion

138. Jonon 10 Sep 2008 at 6:01 am 138

*sigh* I really am a bit torn about this. One, I think that your heart is in the right place, no, I know it is. You see something that you believe flies in the face of our faith. I am a Christian, I believe God created the universe and everything in it, so I think I know where your coming from in your opposition to Spore. You don't want to let your child play Spore, that's perfectly fine. If I were a parent and in your position I would at least make sure they knew and believed that God made us and the universe and that there is this false theory of evolution out there and they knew the difference between a game and reality. And...hang on...*gets soap box* since when did it become ok to present evolution as a fact and not a theory (a false theory but a theory none the less)? It just annoys me that most people just generally accept evolution to be fact and not that it is in reality still an unproven theory. *gets off soap box* Anyhoo, I do understand why you don't want to let your child play Spore, however I really don't think you should bash a game if you haven't played it and thoroughly understand its content. I hope you see what I'm going to tell you as advice, please, please at least know what the game really entails before you attack it. You present this game as if the only means to advance is wholesale slaughter and that every being in the game is a demonic monster. The game is all about player choice, you control the vast majority of the content in the game. You make your creature however you want it. If there's some creature in the game that's offensive you can block it from your game and I believe that sends a complaint to Maxis about that certain creature. And about those sex creatures you posted, they are all user created. There is nothing Maxis can do about them. It's the sad truth that whenever you put a tool set that can create almost anything, people will misuse it. But that doesn't mean the Mr. Wright wanted people to make those or intended them to be in his game. The games rating does seem to be a bit low to me. This really does seem like it should have gotten a T rating, and it wouldn't surprise me if the rating were changed. I doubt that what I have to say will change your opinion of the game, and really I don't want it to. If you're going to oppose the game, please know the truth of what's in the game and don't just pick and chose aspects of it that make it seem horrible. I really enjoy this game, but I know that it's based on a false theory. I play it because it really is an astounding technical accomplishment and an over all fun game. God bless you sir 😊

I'm just curious, and correct me if I'm wrong, but do you think that all the people on this planet originated just 2,000 years ago? Because if so, please explain away all the things the theory of evolution has proven through science. I was raised a Christian, but I have a head on my shoulders and don't believe for a minute this nonsense that was "allegedly" written as a bible. It's a great book to live by, that's for sure, but reality overtakes fantasy... If you scoff at me, look at Scientology and how that pseudo-religion came about by one person's greed for money. 1. Spore is a game. In this game you are allowed to make whatever creature you want out of the given parts, then upload them the internet. It's kinda like making toys like kennex then sharing them with friends. If you don't want to see the other things people have made, then you can turn that feature off.

2. They are not demons, and you do not take over the galaxy. You can make them friendly looking benevolent creatures, and gain friends by simple simon says games. You can progress in the game by being friendly OR mean, it is the players choice.

I myself am christian and I too do not believe in evolution but let me put it this way....

YOUR OVERREACTING ITS FREAKIN GAME

155. TaLeZon 10 Sep 2008 at 7:04 am 155

My I ask why you religious zealots like you may teach your beliefs and push them on others but when something about evolution pops up you go berserk. What ever happened to freedom of religion. People like you are complete fools. Also Spore is just a harmless game that is meant to be fun, people like you bring it out of context. You do not see an Atheist saying a game about the Bible should not be marketed to children.

156. 8utt3rson 10 Sep 2008 at 7:14 am 156

I dont believe in god, I believe in myself and I'd create my own creature as I want!

Evolution is SCIENCE!!!
CREATIONISM is RELIGION!!! and religion is people's good will, not a real existence!

157. some kidon 10 Sep 2008 at 7:15 am 157

ok, heres the skinny, im a kid, and i have spore, i beleive in god, spore did not change my beleives at all, it just made me realize how fun it was to play the game, i am very sorry that you have to be dissed by a 13 year old kid, but i think you deserve it.

If you shelter your kid from all of this news that is going on in the world, i can promise you that he will have very many troubles making friends in school, because nowadays this kind of stuff is a lot of what most kids talk about.

Please know this, if you want your son to succeed in his OWN life, let him make mistakes, let him know what is wrong and what is right(not by your standards).

The way i was taught about who to love, is god is first, others are second, and love yourself last, you must love everybody.

I hope you read this, and i hope your son reads all of this also, because no matter how hard you try, you cant shelter him from reality.

158. My God.on 10 Sep 2008 at 7:18 am 158

Please don't be so bias and one-sided. Things like "Veggie Tales" are total Christian propaganda and aimed directly at children. You probably don't see a problem with those things but i'm sure athiest parents would, if they cared about such miniscule items such as you do.

159. jaseon 10 Sep 2008 at 7:24 am 159

praise God for putting people like us on this beloved land of his. I 100% agree with you on this one. Spore is a demon hiding in our computer waiting for our kids to corrupt and soil their minds. I mean, this is seriously ridiculous and I thank all those who will read this comment and share my views.

The fact that this game allows our dear children to be creative is a sin in itself. When a child is creative they are expressing themselves and this may be bad. Children should only express God's feelings and teachings from the Bible. Praise the Bible. We should only focus on the bible so nothing bad will ever happen. Life will be the same forever and nothing could possibly go wrong because we are all following Gods true words. His true words people! Because no one just made up the bible. Everything in it has been proven by our brilliant creationist scientists that work day and night just like how I watch over children at night. Every night I watch over children, not just my own, but the beautiful lovely children with plush and plump cocks and pussies. I like to tickle them when they are alone and I like to push my soft penis in their tiny bum holes. God gave me a small penis so no girl will want me. But i can force myself on those innocent little fucking bastard kids. I can slit their throats and fuck the gaping wound with my small penis. I can bite off their nipples and listen to them squeel and squirm while i skin them alive and put them in salted potato sacks and donate them to hospitals so the shit stain objects they are will live a fucking scarred and horrid life. But i like to keep some. I make them recite the entire bible off by heart and if they can't I force them to eat my own shit. To clean my walls. I have 12 of them in my basement and I don't let them see the light of day. Every time one of them speaks I super glue their eyes and ears shut and make the other children poke him to death with needles. Ahh i lust for this shit. My cock gets so fucking hard. It grows to over 9000 meters long. Praise the lord. Praise the bible. SPORE IS SIN

TL:DR: spore is sin

Actually i thought this was pretty funny. You had me at Spore!. Lol, thanks for advertising me that and now i think im going to get ready to play it. Seriously we all know what the ratings are, we all know that children are going to get it. Do they obviously know how to make a creature with all the detail from the boob's, etc. You know what i mean about that. Even if you listen to Will Wright he said that this was just a game for creation. If i re-call games have a lot of creation these days because im one of those mere gamers that go in and buy a game, then after that i make a profile play multi-player like on Call Of Duty 5 thats coming out pretty soon. Thats creating something and probably if you just sit down once to enjoy a nice game and just shut up to create something nice. Then wouldn't that it all be about?. Seriously, all you got is hatred for this guy who created a mere game. Can't you just shut up and play it?.

167. Christianboy 13on 10 Sep 2008 at 8:17 am 167

Hello, I too am a Christian and I have no problem with games at all nor' does the youth pastor at my church! What are you talking about "demon" creatures and just so you know EA isn't allowing inappropriate creatures like that into the game! Just so you know the videos you make do not go through a filtering process nor' do screenshots! So anyone could make a video or screenshot and upload it to youtube or the internet but extremely inappropriate creatures will NOT be allowed to go in others games and you CAN turn off the online sharing so only creations yourself and maxis have made show up in-game. Spore focuses more on creativity than evolution instead of instantly rejecting it I suggest you download the free creature creator from spore.com and try it out. I personally go to church, am Christian and 13...And finally is a video game really going to affect a child more than what you as a parent will say?

168. AllShallPerishon 10 Sep 2008 at 8:17 am 168

Your right we should put an age restriction spore for forcing children to learn about the theory of evloution... Right after we put an age restriction on the bible for forcing children to learn about THEORY (yes an unproved idea) of creationism. Religion enjoys that grand double standard, they love not having to play by their own rules.

This is what blind faith in a fictional omnipotent god will get you, people who think they know whats best for other people. It brings WAR (Crusades anybody?). It brings perversion (Priest molesting little boys). It brings hate ( God loves dead soldiers). What would you expect from a book that is filled to the brim with all the aforementioned?

Now I'm not saying that you aren't entitled to you own opinion, far from it. Just stop forcing your opinion down the throats of everyone you come in contact with. Stop with your double standards, it just make you look pitiful and childish. Your religion might do some good but only to further its own cause. You do work in poor countries, good, but what do you build? You build a few houses sure, but then you build a church to spread "the good news" and get your church tax (and no I didn't make that up). I could go on about how more people have been killed in the name of god then all wars combined, or how blind faith has corrupted the church to believe that they are above law but that would be getting off topic.

So in summation, you should worry more about what is being done in the name of your god then on some video game.

169. blarghon 10 Sep 2008 at 8:17 am 169

this game is made for everyone. yes, the tolls are there to make an M rated creature, but that doesn't mean the person playing it will do it. If they try to make stuff like that, they already have a corrupted mind.

170. Joeyon 10 Sep 2008 at 9:18 am 170

1. It's just a game

2. Most gamers are not religious

3. You are retarded. Go do something more useful like run in a mine field. That might save some children in Vietnam.

God damn people trying to push their religious beliefs everywhere, at least this is a small corner of the net I never have to go to again! Thanks to Kotaku for telling me about this site.

182. SnprSlickon 10 Sep 2008 at 3:02 am 182

I'm sorry, but I have to side with fairbear. You have no clue what you are talking about.

Please do point me to a place in the bible where it disproves evolution's existence.

The bible is SPECIFICALLY vague. Nowhere does it say that God changed things as he saw fit.

Here is some proof of evolution.

Over the past 50 years, Humans have become bigger. Look at people back in the 50s and 60s, most weren't over 6 feet tall. But look at now, your average height is 6' plus for HIGH SCHOOLERS.

Another more modern example would be virus's. Yes, that is evolution at a microscopic level. As we create vaccines, viruses adapt to bypass them.

Give me a verse in the bible that proves me wrong. You won't.

It disappoints me that Christianity has become a polytheistic religion.

186. Frigidair44on 10 Sep 2008 at 3:28 am 186

I love when creationists start spouting off about "Intelligent Design," and consider it to be science. It's a cute PC term that tries to make the 7 day theory legitimate.

I love you guys. I really do. You act high and mighty, but in reality you religious types are bigger bigots and than any other group. There is nothing good about religion I found. And this is coming from born and bred church going Catholic who has done a small bit of research into the Church and left it as a result.

You say the game isn't E for everyone. Well you are wrong. It is E for Everyone. The game is perfectly clean and nice and can be played by anyone of any age. If people want to make a demon race they can. If they want to make a cute race, they can. It's up to them and their imaginations.

However... on-line content is never rated for by the ESRB. NO GAME'S ON-LINE CONTENT IS. Nor is on-line competitive gaming. Why?

Because even in children's on-line games, you can have people spouting off cuss words, and talking about all manner of stuff that is inappropriate for children. There is no way to control what people will say and do.

By your same analogy, a box of crayons and a piece of scratch paper isn't meant for 5 year olds. Yes, with those tools you can make all sorts of nasty disgusting pictures of naked folks, demons, and death. Not to mention crosses burning, spreading propaganda that praises Hitler, and making pamphlets that spread lies.

Lets ban those as well! C'mon, in fact lets ban EVERYTHING that kids and people can use to create!

You sir are an idiot for thinking that way. You want to know the best way to keep kids from seeing all this "evil?" Be a parent. Watch what they do. Supervise them and their activities.

You don't want them playing Spore? Don't let them. Control your computers content access. Read up on current events and the games that they play. Can't watch the kids all the time? Well in that case if you were a good parent, they will make the right decision. If they don't and you catch them, PUNISH them.

If your kid fucked up and does something you don't approve of, it's your fault until they are 18, and nobody else. You are responsible.

Don't blame the game. It's like blaming the gun because it killed somebody. Not the person who pulled the trigger.

But really thank you for posting your ignorance and own hate because of what a few bad apples on the net did. This website was good for a laugh.

There is a banning tool in game dipshits. If you see a creature/building/vehicule which you do not like or find offensive you can select the ban option and a message will be sent to EA with the unacceptable content so they can remove it for~~EVAR~~ from their database WHICH IS ENTIRELY MADE BY PEOPLE LIKE YOU AND ME. NOT SATAN OR EA. All those penis creatures were simply made by people who wanted to get a good laugh out of the creature editor. Hey let's take the worst exemple from youtube and have them out as the majority. So what if they want to teach Evolution to everyone? You Christians have the right to teach everyone Christianity, much like every other religion around, yet you forcefully try to prevent people from believing other things than your own beliefs.

Many schools in Britain teach Religion in school to kids at a young age with no choice. I believe people should be allowed to make up there own choice fully, and not be forced into Religion under the age of 12, like I was.

You have the right to your opinions, of course. But so do I. And so do the billions of people who haven't been whitewashed by religious institutions. Spore is a great game, and the fact that it opens kid's eyes to science and the nature of how life on this planet evolved is a good thing, and a sign of the progress the human race has made. To attack it for not falling in line with aged, ill-informed and ignorant beliefs is staggering.

I know that your opinions are tragically widespread in America – in reality, that's part of the reason why your country is so unpopular internationally. But you should know that 99% of Europeans reading this will do nothing more than laugh. "Dear oh dear, those stupid fundamentalist Americans are at it again!" will be the typical reaction I would imagine.

Honestly, open your eyes. I reckon if you just tried to think for yourself for a brief moment you might realise that not only are your beliefs preposterous, but this little crusade of yours is all rather silly.

Two points...

Firstly it wouldn't be 'Evolutionist Propaganda' as most of us that have sat down and contemplated the existence of a divine being take evolution as written. There is no need of propaganda, well not to support evolution anyway.

Secondly, you are a model Christian in that you are telling others how to live their lives. Well done, it's obviously having an impact I'll say that much.

210. Dustinon 10 Sep 2008 at 7:04 am 210

"The object of the game is to evolve from a "spore" into demon-like intelligent space creatures that violently take over the galaxy. Such as this one below."

No... it's not.

If you'd have bothered to do even a bit of decent research you;d have found out that near any kind of creature can be created, not just these "demon-like" ones you seem so afraid of. And along with that, there's multiple ways to expand yourself throughout the universe, including peacefully.

211. megadon 10 Sep 2008 at 7:04 am 211

"Resisting EA's War on Creationism"

O'rly?

My god... After my initial first hearing of this website, I was like "oh, it'll be a joke". But seems like it's not. Seems like the Church of the Lord himself is still as conservative and retarded as it has always been. Challenging creatonism? Not allowing free thought? "God created everything, the Bible is holy" you are saying? Well I accept free thought, and as a non-religious person I respect others' ways and opinions. But it seems like the God-forgives-and-welcomes-everyone-with-open-arms-club is still as unwilling to accept other ideas as always.

For starters, I won't be holding an anti-religion speech here. Everyone should be able to choose for themselves wheter or not to believe in a certain god or being. But what you are doing here, is a bridge too far.

1. It is not because others have other opinions than you, that they should burn in hell and be punished for not believing in God. And even if this ain't the case: not everyone is the same. Get over it.

2. Will Wright is evil? Seriously man, I'm no fan of either Sims game nor Sim City, but Will Wright is a freaking genius. He's brought innovation and new ideas to the fastest growing entertainment industry in the world – game development – where others remained with recycling old ideas. What's next? Burning him on the stake?

3. Spore is a game. Spore ISN'T reality. It is only as realistic as you make it yourself. And why should we care that your sick mind tries to create naked women in Spore? If that is the only thing you can think of to make in the editor, there is a serious hole in your brain. And if this site is a proof of your brain-genius, I don't doubt that. Spore IS NOT reality. It is only as "insulting" as you make it sound yourself. Face it.

4. Games are an entertainment medium. The purpose of games is to enjoy yourself, lose yourself in fantasy, and have a good time. Games are NOT meant to be religious predicaments crouded with bullshit, nor are they an attack against other people's way of thinking.

5. I'll stop at #5. I could get on with this until I hit #98569, but I have the impression that you won't listen or even read this anyway. If you would, it would mean that you have a sense for reason, and I think this site proves just a little bit otherwise.

Ah well, whatever. Idiots are required for the entertainment of the others.

I understand your point of view of the whole thing and I respect your opinion and your right to have it.

That said, I do want to comment that you make the game seem more violent than it is. Yes, violence can be a part of it, but I played through the game by befriending the different species and working together with them. Like most of the other things in spore, it's up to the player to decide what to do, and violence is not a requirement.

Man...do you really believe what you're saying? It's so hilarius... so children watching the creatures they created themselves evolving or even having sex will do more harm to them than believing in some exrange power beyond time and space that created it all? Really man this is ridicoulus.

This is a totally harmless game for anyone. In fact, it IS educating for our children. I mean, religion is ok for helping us teach our children about some ethics and morals and only during the period they're are not grown enough to understand some things...but really, do anyone trully believe that evolution, reproduction and such things are evil?

Sorry man, but the war you started with this game is a non-sense crusade.

Ok great another website slating peoples personal opinions whilst guarding their own as "The Correct Opinion". Firstly in my opinion this unflinching "Faith" that leads humans from all areas of the globe to "sin" by killing one another for the best interests of their individual "Gods" is without any kind of sense or humanity. If God has listed "Thou shalt not kill" as a commandment, where is the sub clause that says "unless its someone of another faith". Its fine to swan about as the cream of the crop from western civilization having done exceedingly well from raping and pillaging less educated and simpler folk capturing slaves and sinning beyond belief, bullying our religious beliefs upon other cultures and civilizations. Where is the moral and religious sense in creating our own weapons of mass destruction for "defensive" purposes to sin by murdering others, its ok though, they are a group of people and not an individual. Its easy to kill factions and groups because they have no face, it would be different if you had to kill each individual with a knife and look them in the eyes. Where is the "turn the other cheek"? easy its contradicted by an eye for an eye. I find it strange that God has personally left us contradicting information about his existence, lifestyle commandments, history and afterlife, only to let us have a battle royal in his name. but I digress, this is an intuitive and creative game that has elements of many games that have been available in the past, populous for example. No one complained then. I also don't see this game saying "discover the truth about the creation of earth and its inhabitants". Many of the religious arguments to scientific explanations of creation and the "big bang theory" have ended being accepted but that God wanted it to happen so he made it happen. Fine the worlds extremist inhabitants (that's you admin and many other types) annoy me enough but everyone has the right to an opinion, and to live by their own beliefs as long as the don't interfere with others, how would you feel if you couldn't eat or drink certain foods because someone else's religion was imposed upon you. I get it though its the great western way wake up with a healthy dose of Jesus to put you in the mood for dictating how people should live. Down with communism down with Mohamed down with any religion that isn't your own fuck anyone else's view their wrong, its a miracle that they are even alive I mean living for so long incorrectly. After all we all know that Christianity has been around since the cretaceous period hence there being several chapters of the bible being dedicated to this and the Christians rex the mightiest of all dinosaurs after slaying the Islamosaurus for its pitiful and lacking ideals. Hopefully you will know that this isn't true but hey your the kind of retard fuckwit that would probably reply thinking its what I believe. The truth of the matter is that no one knows what's out there that's why death is the next big adventure. Yet again this is a game which neither agrees or disagrees with religious views it also fails to "corrupt" young impressionable individuals, it does however provided an entertaining supreme being simulation of life sustaining interplanetary terra forming with an incredible customization of life from the bacterial stage up. I have ranted long enough now and the is still more to go but I have wasted enough time on this pathetic argument. Learn to live with others in acceptance tolerance and understanding. These are the things that in the western culture we promote but fail so incredibly at.

Humans are evil as hell for you info. They can rape, murder and kill w/out caring. Not everyone is like that but they are able to so, ...a video game has no influence on humans at all. We have the ability to do anything regardless if wrong or right so STFU and get laid.

235. Koenon 10 Sep 2008 at 9:40 am 235

hmmm... OK. question for you: If the game included the species to become religious, would you still be against this game? Why not attack games like Civilization for 'inventing' religion? Or 'Black&White' in which you are a god?

And why can't this game be? Because YOU don't believe in it? Well, I don't believe in the bible, or any other god. But it's OK with me if you want to believe.

This site is just as fundamentalistic as some Islam sites are. Im not saying that by reading this site people will wear bomb-belts, but you're forcing your beliefs towards others.

And last of all, who said this game is based on real-life? THIS GAME IS FICTIONAL! Let it be and go read your precious bible, and let gamers play their bible!

PS. If you're against this game and don't want your son to play it, just don't buy it!

Dude are you retarded or sick? the evolution theory is proven by science! your so called theory isn't.

there is no prove of a supreme being what so ever.

that you think the game is offensive is no reason to go complain about your o so poor soul and that it offended your little person! there is only 1 simple thing you have to do! DON'T PLAY IT! EA doesn't force you to buy or play it so buy a pack of tissues and go cry in a small corner where no 1 sees you and you don't bother/annoy anyone.

If you/your kind of religion freaks want respect maybe its time you start to respect other people who has other ideas than you! and if im correct 1 of the 10 commandments is have respect for EVERYONE! leave people in there value and they will do the same to you!

and because you dont show any respect i wont,

240. Benon 10 Sep 2008 at 10:20 am 240

Surely by playing the role of a CREATOR being, who uses intellect to design a life form which is then given choice and free will, it's promoting your view just as much as the other one?

To say that the Human race has not evolved and slowly changed even since biblical times is to ignore absolute immutable fact.

I'd go as far as to say, creationists only workable stance would actually have to be close to this games premise, a god (whichever one you've chosen) set up this whole big sandbox universe and left us to grow as part of his overall plan.

241. Coreyon 10 Sep 2008 at 10:29 am 241

I just would like to know do you believe everything in the bible to be 100% true?

Because one of the stories involves God granting a prayer to have Sun stopped so it will be constant daylight so that they can defeat their enemy. As we know now a days Earth rotates around Sun and Sun does move but it's movement does not create our days.

The bible messed up on that one and it is possible that it messed up elsewhere.

It is just much easier to prove the rotation of planets than it is to prove/disprove evolution.

If you like the game/idea fine but in your case you dont. So simply do not buy it.

242. Marcuson 10 Sep 2008 at 11:01 am 242

OMG, check this comment;

"You would think that as a member of the Episcopal Church, a smart man like Will Wright would not be capable of creating Spore. However, we must be reminded that the Episcopal Church is the only church in america that ordains homosexuals on a regular basis."

The example of an intolerant, fundamentalist American. This is – like Despair said before me – why the US is so unpopular internationally. Most Americans don't seem to notice and think the rest of the world is inferior. However, I'm glad to say that i've met some well-thinking Americans and that their numbers are increasing. It might not happen soon but eventullly there will be little fundamentalist Americans. Evolution is key...

243. Ronon 10 Sep 2008 at 11:06 am 243

all the spammers and foul language aside I do feel I have to say that I think you have too long toes there, you can't force your opinions on others and neither is EA doing so, buy the game or not, ban it from your household or not... but all this is just way out of proportion, there are loads of opinions/beliefs/religions on this planet... if everybody had to take into account all of those whenever creating something nothing would ever get created or done... simply be nice, respectful (which you have to earn to get) and lenient as I'm sure if there is a God he would want us to be; to live together in harmony instead of lashing out every single time you don't agree with or like something!

246. Morrion 10 Sep 2008 at 11:31 am 246

I don't get it... Why not let people (even children) make up their minds themselves about what to believe? Banning information or depriving an individual of 'different sides of a story' won't give the individual any choices, nor does it teach them to be curious and critical, something which in this day and age is a much needed asset to survive, with all the information overflow.

On top of that (and pardon me for the spoiler) is the ending of Spore not at all anti-Christian. The end of the game is in the center of the universe, and just take a guess what you will find there?

Jeemig-de-pemig, wat een gelul, mens! Heb je niks beters te doen? Het enige dat je hiermee bereikt is dat EA nog meer aandacht krijgt en dat er nieuwsgierige mensen het spel juist gaan kopen. Kassa voor EA! Leef maar lekker verder in de 'bible belt'.

251. Peteron 10 Sep 2008 at 12:04 pm 251

Thanks for climbing on this soap box. Not only did it confirm what I thought of US fundamentalist Christians, but it also gave me a good laugh.

Let's try to get serious for a moment.

Of course, you are entitled to your opinion. I will defend your right to voice your opinion even if it kills me – but when you deny EA, or me, to express their, or my, opinion, you're game. Quod erat demonstrandum.

My problem with your argument is this:

“this sort of game is not acceptable”

While this may be your opinion, let's face it: your opinion is not by definition fact. Therefore, you should have phrased it somewhat like “I find this sort of game unacceptable.”

But my main concern is that you appear to consciously want to keep information, and opinions opposing your own belief, away from your offspring – thereby denying them the opportunity to choose for themselves. That, in my opinion, is Bad Parenthood(TM).

252. Mikeon 10 Sep 2008 at 12:04 pm 252

Did you happen to catch National Geographic's take on Evolution last night? They use actual science to prove Darwin was right.

They showed all the 'missing links' that have been found in the past 10 years and cleaned up all the other arguments coming from the Christian camp – helping to make you all look like idiots.

If you believe that Evolution is false, or that there are too many 'holes' in the theory you should really try to sit down and watch it – as it explains in detail how and why the ideas of evolution took hold in the scientific community and provides something Christians could never provide – proof. Fossils, fossils and more fossils. Real, scientific proof.

I'm glad that religion is on the decline in this country, and I sleep better at night knowing that within a few generations it will permanently be a thing of the past – replacing fear and bias with knowledge and information.

253. Jordanon 10 Sep 2008 at 12:04 pm 253

it's weird to read such hostility, and all about a game, which is supposed to entertain. you(admin) do not like the game, that's your right, but others have the right not to agree with you and enjoy the game for what it is.

To speculate what Will Wright was thinking when he created the game is kind of playing God yourself, as we don't know what was in his mind. And even if he wants to educate people about evolution, that's his right too! Although there would be less expensive and time consuming methods to do that.

The way I see it, God (a God, Mother Nature or whoever you want to envision who fits your belief) created this world and everybody in it, so a 'creation' by Will Wright is indirectly a creation by God.

Organized religion has been responsible for many reprehensible stuff in this world, I don't think a game like Spore can even stand in the shadow of the evil that is called 'Religious Conversion'

254. Kafeinon 10 Sep 2008 at 12:10 pm 254

Hey guy, your Holy Bible is just an old book, written more than 2000 years ago.

HOW DO YOU CAN TRUST THAT OLD PEOPLE ACTUALLY WRITTEN THE SAME WAY AS US ???

You have to LEARN the language of the Bible. Ancien people have different vocabulary, expressions, symbols, interests than us. For example, Apocalypse (sorry if it's false, english's not my mother language) is the tale of the destruction of the world of the autors (a tiny world... arabic peninsula, a bit of mediterranea... ( twice sorry for bad english ) ) by NERON, the famous 666 IS A SYMBOL FOR NERON, the roman arrivist. You want a demonstration, or scientific method is just a theory ? I give it : Apocalypse was writed just before that arrived. That's it ! Go verifying, you can do it, it won't harm you. So I am writing as friendly as I can with you, trying to develop some free intelligence in a whitewashed head, but I have some others arguments.

Do you really think that attacking a game that improves self expression, allows dreams or nightmares in a so smart manner can get you a good image for people that have an education ( I mean real education, not the one who don't let you develops your own opinions, like the one you get while you couldn't negate it, or even ask about it in an critical way ) ? No, of course. Hopefully, creationism is not too widespread, but it's not cool that creationism sectarisms are well accepted in the US, one or the one more powerful land of the world, that's very sad, frankly. I say that because you are not better than a taliban. Just make the comparrison, without saying who is true and who is false... YOU AND YOUR FUCKING CREATIONISTS ARE MORE DANGEROUS THAN AFGHAN TALIBANS OR ISLAMIC TERRORISTS, AND YOUR FUCKING BELIEFS ARE AS STUPID.

just about a fantasy world that can be created by the player, it isn't even realistic. Please stop wasting your time on this and grow up please!

263. Karaon 10 Sep 2008 at 1:42 pm 263

Oh please, why on earth would a video game company have an agenda to indoctrinate children with evolution? EA makes games to MAKE MONEY, not to push religious beliefs. Spore is just an awesome concept (that has been talked about for years – have you been under a rock since 3 days ago???) that will be highly profitable. Plus, who says this game is for children? I'm 21 and all my 21-ish friends are playing it. This game is fun for everyone. And give kids some credit – their beliefs aren't going to change just because of playing a video game. Do kids think they can crash into cars in real life after playing Mario Kart?

And next, if you're so concerned about "sharing information and progress," why don't you actually educate yourself and quit being so ignorant? For example, FYI, the creatures can take over planets using diplomacy, not just violence. Do some research before you spew any more drivel.

As someone of faith with an advanced degree in biologic science, I can say your views, although well-meaning, are misguided. Your disregard that the game evokes Creation at least as much as Darwinism (if not more so) stems from your personal anxieties. Forget theology or biology or any combination of such. The game is an obvious oversimplification of Creation — you just don't like that it disagrees with YOUR oversimplification. By what method exactly do you purport God created the world? Can't you see the exquisite beauty of His creation right before your eyes? Do not profess to have reviewed the sum of evolutionary biology and found it false. It is a gargantuan discipline that some spend their lives exploring, that manifests itself throughout your life... in your urges and hungers, in the immense and ancient battle between a billion of your immune cells and disease. In no way does it preclude Creation — it reveals it more splendidly than ever. Evolution is a 'theory' in the scientific sense that it is testable and falsifiable. It is not opposite of 'fact', nor does it mean 'hunch' as it does in lay speech. Gravity is a 'theory'. There is 'atomic theory' and 'cell theory'... Open your mind – creation is no game.

Sure you are entitled an opinion, but please don't use quotes from a very usefull book that was written thousands of years ago. The content has to be explained according to the values of the days it was written. They differ somewhat from what we are used to.

Please don't judge someone else. Let everybody please live in peace.

.... and get adjusted to the modern day insigths in theology. They wrote it took 7 days to "create" the world. Somewhere something must have gotten lost in translation. Nowadays we know better.

Wow! I'm shocked at how narrow minded you are. I don't play spore, or plan to play spore, but I'm fascinated by people like you. You are scared that this "fictional video game", just like 99.9% of all video games on the market, is going to somehow teach your child a new belief system!? Are video games something you commonly administer to your child as a form of education? If they are, you are just as poor of a parent as the rest of the "plop em in front of the TV" parents.

Why don't you buy your child a book or take him to a museum? Just don't take him to the Natural History Museum which exhibits true facts about evolution and don't buy him a book that isn't stamped with a cross and you'll have your child as brainwashed as your heart desires.

I feel bad for you child. He's going to have to fight for his own thoughts and opinions while you are force feeding him B.S.

I'm christian, and I don't believe in the full theory of evolution, but you're just an idiot. This game is goddamn awesome. This game doesn't teach evolution, actually, it balances the two theories. This game lets the players take the role of a god, and that god guides the creatures from the earliest forms of life, into a galactic empire creature. And you don't have to do so violently. You can choose to unify the universe peacefully. (If you're a goddamn hippie, that is.) And where do you get these 'demon' assumptions? I'll tell you where: NOWHERE.

Go buy your son Spore, admit that this is A VIDEO GAME THAT CAN'T DO ANY DAMAGE to anyone else, and hang yourself, 'kay?

298. How pathetic...on 10 Sep 2008 at 8:59 pm 298

Can you be any more stupid? This is the optimum level of idiots who don't know that they're talking about talking about video games. I mean, why not make a blog about GTA? That has the ability for the character to sin over and over. Why must you think that because I, a thirteen year old Quaker Christian am going to forget that Christ died for my sins because I love Spore? I mean, shouldn't you focus on having relationship with him instead of bashing a game? I mean, who says God didn't create evolution? I don't know the answer other than God created the world in seven days. But what type of days? Were they Lunar Calendar days? No. They couldn't be up to date days because they didn't go off of the Solar Calendar in the days of Christ and before. Therefore I believe that days were to give a perspective of the fact that time is an illusion. So anyways, I say you should allow your son to play it, and he won't get any bit 'corrupted.' It's people like you who are just as bad as the over extremist Muslims, if you can't force people to have it your way, it should be terminated. How sick.

Honestly? A little creative element in a video game and you go insane? You're either the greatest troll the internet has ever seen, or you're retarded. I mean, seriously. Is your religion all you think about? Creationism CANNOT BE PROVEN.

Now this is where you'll try to make a wicked comeback by using circular reasoning.

This is why religion is so stupid. No, scratch that. People like YOU are stupid. People who believe one thing SO STRONGLY that their minds cannot even see the light of day.

For example: In one post you said something that was remotely close (And probably was) gay bashing for the sake of religion. Now consider this: God made everything. Correct so far? God controls everything. Still followin' me? God MADE gays. Whoawhoawhoawhoa, back the fuck up. No. God didn't make gays. Yes, god made gays. He has control over everything, correct? If he didn't want them around, don't you think there wouldn't BE any?

Just, please, for the sake of the general human gene pool, kill yourself.

I'm 14 years old. I left you my REAL email. I hope you open your fucking eyes.

306. Robon 11 Sep 2008 at 2:41 am 306

Using the Bible as a literary cook book for history is blasphemy.

The Bible doesn't tell us WHAT happened en HOW it happened, it tells is WHY it happened. The Bible gives us answers to questions that are fundamentally religious, questions about meaningfulness. Science gives us the answers to technical questions, the what and how. This simply means that there is no conflict between science and religion in general and between science and christianity in particular. They aim at answering different questions.

Creationism is in no way whatsoever a alternative to evolution. It is an invention by people that believe that God can only act within the limited bandwidths of their own understanding. That truly is an insult to God.

Ironically my friend and I were talking today about Spore and wondering how many people probably believe that Spore's version of evolution is the kind of evolution taught in schools. Is it 1000 people? 10,000 perhaps?

It's really sad to see websites such as this because they are completely founded on ignorance. First of all, the "evolution" portrayed in the game isn't really evolution at all, but a super naive version of evolution.

Well this post is pretty pointless because it's reaching only deaf ears. The one thing I find so ironic about extremist religious people is how stubborn they are when it comes to evolution. The very fact that evolution exists and is so beyond us is practically proof in itself that something out there that is better than human beings exists and is intelligent enough to create something infinitely complex as existance.

You only hate evolution because it contradicts the book you so closely follow, but the question is, do you really follow that book as closely as you think? Do you follow everything it says in its text word for word or do you interpret certain parts that seem too archaic for our day and age? Like so many religious people out there, I'm betting you interpret the parts that are convenient in your life.

Anyway the one thing I wish is that religious people would keep their opinions to themselves.

I can't help but be amused at the Google Ads which are on this blog; any one else noticed that they're advertising Spore to buy online?

Owner of this blog: Do you now believe that Google are in line with Beelzebub and all of his hellish minions in trying to corrupt the world?

Tell me; were you also one of the people who protested about the Harry Potter movies and novels because it "promotes witchcraft" (and if you think *that's* witchcraft then you're in for a shock...)?

I'm also assuming that you're one of those types who thinks that "The DaVinci Code" is "an act that is repulsive to god and man, [and] it shows how the church has compromised with their world system and abandoned the simple truth of the Gospel of Jesus Christ" (or some other pious nonsense like that)?

Does it not say in the bible "Let he who is without sin cast the first stone." We are all human and not one of us is free from having sinned in life (not even you); regardless of whether we have been forgiven or not. The only true one who can cast that stone would be god (should he exist).

I'd also like to highlight the lack of capitalisation in the words "god, him, one" etc; this is because I do not believe in your god, and if he did exist, it's a very sad outlook on life that this petty miniacle bastard would punish souls to a lifetime of hellfire and torment simply because they didn't believe in him...

Leave science to scientist and go back worshipping a being made up in a story written in the bronze age and redirected, rewritten and badly translated during it's entire existence. For now enjoy the game.

324. Rienon 11 Sep 2008 at 6:48 am 324

Christians only think about how to protect their children from outside influences. In an effort to indoctrinate them with their "religion". If this game is wrong because it teaches evolution, I can come to the same conclusion about "religions" they are wrong because they only teach creationism (is that even a word?). Even more wrong than evolution because in evolution there is room for debate and for free thought. In "religion" there is no room for debate and free thought because everyting is written down and therefor it is the "truth".

I must say I am truly sick and tired of mostly american worshippers for pressing on to us their faith. Stop this nonesence and give people the freedom to make their choices.

About the game, if I apply the same logic to the game as you did I would come to the following conclusion.

I the user/player of the game create a lifeform and then set it free in its own environment. Thus becoming God e.a. the creator of all (as you say that it happens) I.e. In the whole world there is not a better game then this to explain how you religious people say the world works. But because it is not God who is the creator but man himself this game is wrong because, according to you, man was not ment to be a god. See the paradox that all religious people have created and therefor will never be able to convert everyone to your backwards religion.

325. Rienon 11 Sep 2008 at 6:51 am 325

Well, you are wrong you know, the game is closer to creationism than evolution. even after an hour of playing you can completely overhaul your creature and make something completely different (4 legs instead of 28). that is no evolution, evolution states species change in small steps not in one huge leap. It takes a deity to change a creature so fundamentally...

you should have taken the game as an example of creationism,not attack it. now everyone will burn your arguments down because they are silly. You could have frustrated people so much more if you took will wright and admired him for this amazing god sim, which shows that the intervention from above is needed to create a species...

360. Grats to youon 11 Sep 2008 at 2:56 pm 360

I read this, and couldn't believe my eyes. The mechanics of Spore are broken down into 3 main rolls – good, middle and evil. That's the basic terms atleast. You get a Spore rating at the end of each stage (creature, tribal, city etc.) which tells you which route you went down. For a challenge I actually took the social/religious route. Creating a utopia like atmosphere, lacking in anything demonic except maybe the obvious presence that religion can have, my empire used uneducated beliefs and ideals to lure people in, and it worked. When I say people, I actually mean bipedal rabbits. Herbivores that never killed anything.

You are focusing on 1/3rd of the game, that being the "evil" third. Spore was created for people to make choices, if your children or you choose to look at it in an evil way, that's your choice. You obviously have not taken note of the cutesy and happy looking texture. I bet you're one of the people who complained about Black And White, and I bet you haven't ever played either.

366. Dutch Guyon 11 Sep 2008 at 3:48 pm 366

Well, This is what make me so fucking mad about those insane "Christians"

Christians DONT RULE THE WORLD.

People do, and not all of those people believe in god and all that stuff. In fact. Religion as it is followed now is not even the real religion people started once. But since Roman Emperor Constatin just grabbed some part from Pagan religion and others, shuffled them about and voila. A religion is born. Sad to see that so many people believe something that is only proven in their mind.

Realise one thing ADMIN. Which could almost be written as DAMIAN (the omen) You dont have to buy the game, you dont even have to look at the game. The only reason you are sooooo scared of the game is that your children will start to THINK for themselves and realise that religion is only for people who cant think for themselves.

Considering you being a father Im desperately hoping your children will start thinking of the world for themselves and you find yourself alone, a christian but alone.

Behave like a true Christian and respect everybodys choice for these matters.

Think that it's just a game of an alternative universe where the rules of evolution play a big role. Rules just in a game. Ok, I believe that the same rules apply in the real universe too. But think this is just a game. Or go write your own game where you play god and follow the biblical story of creation. Or go play populous. Or black & white. You control gods there. But spore will rule because it's made by demoscene ninjaz!!!

In that sense it might be useful, for your own wellbeing to stop seeing things that do not match your own values as propaganda. There is no battle going on on who is right or not about what really happened, so stop making things worse for the people around you that do not support the theory of creationism.

Religious propaganda technique no. 3: Conveniently omit information that doesn't support your point.

“demon-like intelligent space creatures that violently take over the galaxy”

Violent conquest is an option in the game but it is equally possible to play with the goal of uniting planets through diplomacy as it is violence – that is the player's choice. You can even go out and try to indoctrinate them with religious propaganda.

Why don't you just get off of the internets and keep to yourself about all this stupid creationism Bullshit and just raise you kids. I'm sure you're just not getting the point of this game, and that you even believe the most obviously comical videos and pictures are real. .....but you're dumb as a rock.

I don't know what church you follow or all that religious details. If you think that God will strike you down for playing a game like this then I'm sorry for your children and the parent they got.

Go to your Bible and ‘pray’ for us all because we're all going to hell for playing the game. We are judged by what we do in our lives and if it's deemed good and just by those around us and our own social laws. God's laws have more meaning than just some words written on a tablet, think of that while you curse your children to an anti-social life.

A word for the other fans that have posted. I'm sorry to say but our anti-spore campaign manager here is a religious zealot and anymore negative comments will just fuel his drive, so it would be best just to leave him alone and never visit his blog.

400. Lizardgrad89on 12 Sep 2008 at 1:10 pm 400

The issue that religious types have with evolution isn't actually with evolution at all.

It really isn't.

No, what they really are against is using evolution to answer "the origin question".

Evolution theory is more than just "does stuff change". Anybody who has had more than one flu shot understands that the virus changes over time. Even religious people get that.

No, Evolution has two components.

1. Life changes
2. Over time, simple organisms evolve into more complex organisms.

#2 is the crux of the matter.

The fossil records indicate that, the further back in time we go, the simpler the life forms are. We can go back to the time when mollusks ruled the world, but before then, life forms had no body parts that would leave a fossil record.

So what happened before that? Well, according to evolutionary theory, as we go back, life will continue to get simpler, until ultimately there is no life at all.

This is where it gets ugly.

Scientists are looking for a theory as to how life started, while religious folks say "God did it". Now, VERY religious folks don't believe in the reality of the fossil record or carbon dating, and say that the world is 4,000 years old, and that those old bones and stuff was put here by God to test us.

So you see, it's not about evolution, as in, "does life change", but rather trying to use evolutionary theory to answer the origin question.

And that's why I think this blog is bogus. A true religious person would understand the real issues.

And, just for the record, I'm with the scientists, not the religious folk.

417. Emre on 13 Sep 2008 at 12:48 am 417

Spore is not really about evolution, it's about users building content. Before spore, to create content for a game, you needed to have artists and expensive tools. Spore brings the content creation tools to a level where anyone can create content. Before spore, if someone needed to create a computerized depiction of genitalia, knowledge of complex modeling programs was a prerequisite. Not everyone has the dedication to sit and learn to use a complex modeling program like Maya, Lightwave or Blender, and the ones that do have the dedication aren't shallow enough to have the sole aim of creating phallic depictions. With Spore, any layman now has the ability to create and animate somewhat complex models, including things that look like reproductive organs or mammary glands. With the technical knowledge barrier removed, the consequences are obvious. The teenager who was drawing cock and balls during Algebra class is now making a cock and balls creature in Spore.

If you want to see evolution simulation on a computer, check out Jeffrey Ventrella's GenePool. <http://www.swimbots.com/>

Your oppinion about Spore is not everbodys oppinion. Just leave the game alone if you don't like it and let us who don't take a silly video game so serious enjoy it.

Maybe you, as a parent, should put some more effort in to teach your kids the differece between reality and the imagination in movies and video games instead, and look up what the game actually is about before you buy it to your children. You could have dug up all this information you got here on this blog about Spore before you bought the game.

424. Ariatula on 13 Sep 2008 at 4:32 pm 424

Inorganic matter reacted to organic matter. Organic matter reacted to self-replicating matter, DNA/RNA/aminoacids/fattyacids and this evolved to first life forms and evolved to complex life forms. Apparently there are forces in matter to react to energy-consuming life forms (low enthalpy/disorder takes energy to retain itself). Matter seems willing to organise itself. If there is a force in matter to organise itself in low disorder, you can measure this force. There must be a quantummechanic law that describes this force. But is this force created? Is matter created? Are natural constants in strong and weak nuclear powers created? (if they differ a fraction there is even no matter). Why are the constants in nature just exact right? No one can tell if they are created by a God or just coincidence. You can only believe in a God or believe in plain coincidence. The only thing that matters is that you can be very astonished that the forces in nature and matter are so elegant that they can produce life and intelligent life, created or coincidence.....

wow. You people are the reason that many persons look down on and despise christians. you don't worship God because he is the way and the truth and the light, you worship him as an easy way to take the moral high ground and tell everyone how you know better than them how they should live their lives and what beliefs they should hold. It is people like you that make everyone think that we as christians are a backwards, isolationist, protectionist, group of people who fear science and modern beliefs in general. if you think this game will make you children believe in evolution, then you must have done a real bang up job of raising them if they will be "turned evolutionist" by a game. By sheltering your kids, by not letting them experience the real world growing up, you are showing them and everyone else that you do not trust them to make the right decisions on their own if they are placed in a situation where they have to choose between going along with the crowd or sticking to their beliefs; you are showing them and everyone else that you have done such a poor job raising them that they are not grounded in their beliefs at all. some people are always looking for a fight, for something or some one or some thing to point their finger at and cry out "EVIL!", and I truly believe those people need to find a better purpose in life, because by doing so, whether they intend to or not, they cast a very negative image on all christians okay so heres my view on this whole site being a catholic/christan myself i do believe that god created the earth

but furthermore i believe in the beliefs in evolution by god putting a human soul into a animal which ultimately turned the animals into humans (adam and eve) but back to topic if your so christian then why are you worried about this?

god always said to respect someones opinion

instead of helping someone who needs help your worrying over a video game that god must of created this game because he must of put the idea in the creators head of course i dont contradict myself i do respect your opinion but just think about what your doing your trying to stop a fun video game that people enjoy i even enjoy it and i DO believe in the bible and the christian beliefs

434. mikeon 14 Sep 2008 at 1:52 am 434

ughhh. jackass. When they say “everyone” including “must not go against the word of god” is like saying “must not include black people” is just moronic. and public schools teach evolution so screw the hell off videogames and keep the battles for whether your religion should be considered supreme to yourself.

this is a game you realize that, religious beliefs aside, you are making christians look bad. Calling will wright evil.... it's a video game that insinuates nothing about reality, it's a fantasy simulation.

437. Joe Smithon 14 Sep 2008 at 6:22 am 437

Your response to Electronic Arts is completely thoughtless. You don't HAVE to create a species hell-bent on destroying the galaxy. Infact, you can create a cute, fuzzy create hell-bent on economic trade and investment. Or, in your case, a pompous donkey promoting his religion on every species in the galaxy. I mean, if your son wants to create war-like demons to destroy the galaxy, take it up with him.

It doesn't matter how hard you try, YOU WILL FAIL in your efforts to demote EA games. YOU might not accept it, and it might be your right as an American to protest, however you are one person. Insignificant to the eyes of all. You will fail in your conquest to eliminate Spore.

Hell, you could be spending all your wasted time and effort on doing something for your community. Donate blood or something. Try that instead of bashing a game that you understand nothing about.

438. Leightonon 14 Sep 2008 at 6:43 am 438

First of all, the fact you believe in both God and Creationism, I can tell you are brainwashed and no matter what anyone tells you or how much proof is thrust toward you, you will just close your eyes and stick your fingers in your ears because “God” is much easier to spell than “Evolution”.

Secondly, you know nothing of this game, it is clear that you've just heard that it was about evolution and you call it blasphemy and propaganda without actually know what else it is about.

You can make things other than “demon-like intelligence”, for example I made a race that preaches and converts others and another that kills and conquers and another that solves everything with money!

I think you are truly deluded into believing in God and creationism.

I pity you. I really, really do.

This is insane...

Hello! All you people taking this site seriously have been the victims of a prank. A very good prank. A well planned and very well implemented prank.

And the fact that, even after the makers of this “blog” admit its a joke, you continue to make yourselves look even more stupid by continuing your campaign against creationism.

You all are so misguided! Didn't you hear the news that God LOVES you?! He don't have to, but he does love all of us. And we don't even deserve it. I shall pray to God and ask Him to forgive you all.

*Kneels down*

"O Chuck Norris, please don't Roundhouse Kick us all, Spore players!"

But seriously, the point of faith is to not doubt our belief. But if you can't doubt what you are sure to know, how can you know that you do know? Because, in order to know that you know, you would have to think, that you know. By doing this, you would first have to ask yourself IF you DO know, which means a doubt. And the point is to ask yourself if what you know is correct. You ask yourself if you ARE correct. So if you don't really think about if you do know, then you even don't ask yourself if you do ARE. So without asking if you know, you can't really be.

Still, according to the bible, none of us are better than the others... So how can't you believe that what you are is better than what I am, without knowing what you are yourself?

Whatever, Spore is simpler to understand. GAME=PLAY=FUN and for most people =NOT LEARNING NOTHING.

A word to the wise: STOP TAKING YOURSELF SERIOUSLY. Please.

You're a fucking idiot. Sorry, but it has to be said. Im a Christian as well, and in this post you say that "The object of the game is to evolve from a "spore" into demon-like intelligent space creatures that violently take over the galaxy."

You can CHOOSE to create a demon-like creature, or you can choose to make a couch as someone has if you bother searching for it. You can choose to slay everyone, or you can form allies with them.

You choose to take the evil path you stupid prick, its Christians like you that give us all a bad name.

Like everbody would think after they played this game: This is us the evolution theory is true, the creatures in the game are the same as human so its got to be true. Come on get real! ITS JUST A GAME!! Fiction! NOT REAL!! Evolution theory is a THEORY! Just like your THEORY that GOD created us! Who's telling you thats what really went on?? The Bible?I dont say that god didn't create us! But you should be more open minded and dont say that every thing others believe is bad. Everyone is equal. And Spore is JUST A GAME= And a game is fun!

I found it rather ironic that you lay blame for this “mature material” solely on EA, when in fact it is entirely user generated content. They did not intend for the users to craft such immature creatures, but it occurred anyway. Blaming them (EA) for these creatures is about as ridiculous as my blaming you for the “offensive responses” found in the comments section of this website. But according to your logic I could indeed blame you, since this is YOUR website, YOUR message, and YOUR decision to allow a public forum. Yet you did not place restrictions on how people could craft their responses, and thus, if I’m following your logic correctly, YOU are solely to blame for the unfortunate amount of profanity I’ve found on this site.

Please, re-think your baseless attack on EA, and your misguided attempts at moral outrage.

Haha, and I got myself a good laugh when you said “Making breakfast and making sure my kids get to school comes first of all”, I mean... 1: No, I dont understand your beliefs.

2: You don’t want to understand the evolutionism, so why the hell would I even try to understand you in the first place?

3: Jesus was a homosexual it’s said, you can read that in the bible with a small b on it, funny many christians can’t tackle that.

4: I can swear how much I wan’t, even with god’s name in it, I havn’t been punished yet, noone has really been punished for cursing what I know. I only know that some psychotic christians burned witches to death in the middleage, that’s not god’s work – it’s the devils work.

5: It’s funny how true this joke can be: “Guess why the pove has such a tall hat? – It’s to hide the devils-horns.”

6: I can’t believe you’re wasting time on this shit – instead of really taking care of your family.

7: What do you do as a christian if it turns out one of your childs are a homosexual? Will you throw him or her on the street? I think god would throw you in the flames of hell if you would do.

8: The list is too long to write here about how much I can question your crazy beliefs, I will now go and get brainwashed by Will Wright and play some Spore! Enjoy all these threats by the way.

PS: I’m sorry you’re so misguided. I will pray for you tonight, togheter with Mother Nature, she will know what must be done with people like you. Good night.

Not meaning to be in anyway harsh at all, but views are a private thing that each of us forms as we grow. My views may differ from yours because of many reasons and to be honest I don't think you'll find anyone that thinks exactly like you. Religion is a wonderful thing for the right people but it can also be a terrible thing when given to the wrong ones. Think of the crusades, even 9/11, both brought on by other humans that made the mistake of trying to impose their views on others. Being the closest to God, they were blinded by the light. No longer believing that they were simply close, but behaving like they had become. What makes people seek God? Can people be contented without Him? A way to get those answers is to step back and look at the world through half closed eyes. Of course people are happy without believing in your God, or in any God for that matter, but in the end it all comes down to turn of phrase. Isn't God everywhere, in everything? When a little league player gets the chance to meet one of their baseball legends, what is the look that twinkles in their eyes? Awe, reverance, fear, the list goes on but in some way they are worshipping at the altar of their God who just happens to only be a little piece of the one that religious zealots covet above all others. It's a bad state of affairs when we have the same people that are spreading the faith, coveting their own God and taking assumed ownership of all that He is. Who told you that evolution is wrong? Who told you to listen? It's the same with your son, give him some credit as a human being, someone just as loved by God as you are. If he wants to believe in evolution, he will, he just probably wouldn't tell you about it. He may even tell you that creation fits perfectly into his belief system, how would you know if that's true? What could you do if it wasn't? When one becomes "Holier than thou" it only serves to make people resent it. It's a bit like being pushed into doing something you don't want to do. If it's of your own free will then you enjoy it and perform better. When you resent the person forcing their will upon you the product will always be hollow. In the end it's the feelings that matter. The intent. Do you honestly believe that SPORE was created with the intent to subvert young minds to the cult of Darwinism? Or that it was made to allow children to be exposed to inappropriate images? I don't... but then that's me. You are you too but please don't forget that others around you are also their own people and that no matter what you say or do that is never going to change.

After reading all of this, I feel REALLY sorry for you, 'admin'. I feel sorry that you can't understand that this company is only making this game to make money. It's the same reason people write books. Sure, they might want to get their ideas out into the open, but haven't you felt that before? You have such a good idea that could benefit you so well that you just have to get it out.

This is all EA is trying to do here: They make a game that can make bring them plenty of money and let people have fun with it. They are NOT by any means trying to convert children into believing in evolution.

I do in fact believe in evolution, but I had the belief LONG before I played Spore.

Now, I know you might make some religious response like 'You are misguided, and I will pray for you', but don't bother. You know in your heart that this is JUST a game. There is NO possible reason someone would try to convert children to believing in evolution. It would not benefit them in any way.

Please, try and understand that there is nothing bad about this game. By criticizing it, you're screaming to the community that you cannot possibly understand any new ideas. Just because you believe differently than others doesn't mean you have to protect them from any other belief than your own.

To sum it all up... GET YOUR HEAD OUT OF YOUR ASS AND STAY OUT OF ISSUES THAT DON'T CONCERN YOU, YOU IGNORANT, PARANOID BASTARD!

I know that you have a lot of responses and probably do not read all of them. I think that people are entitled to their own beliefs. I do not agree with you, but I do not necessarily disagree with you either. You just need to be more open with your thoughts and realize that not all people think like you, and that does not mean that they are evil or need you to pray for them. Stop being so narrow-minded and embrace other people and their beliefs and thoughts and feelings. If you did this along with everyone else, then the world would be such a better place. Don't be so judgmental. I am sure that there are plenty of things that you do that other people don't agree with. Just open your eyes and your mind.

491. Hui Tzeon 21 Sep 2008 at 10:13 pm 491

I can't help but be amused at you. Just so you know, I'm a born and bred Catholic, I believe in God, the Holy Trinity, I attend mass and enjoy singing hymns. I am also a major in biotechnology, I believe that evolution is part of God's work, I have proof that evolution resulted in the formation of the various species and fantastic diversity in the animal kingdom. I also play Spore and I enjoy it very much.

Your site is what I would expect from a bigot. Spore is just a game. It's not real, nor does it say anything about how the creature evolves. The scientist in me knows that evolution sure doesn't happen as it does in the game. Evolution doesn't make the animal sprout wings or horns just at a whim. Evolution requires the various changes in DNA (also known as mutation). Unless of course you don't believe in DNA either!

Just so you know, this is my little theory how our fantastic Creator managed to shove all that world/ universe creating into 7 days.

1. 1 day to God may equivalent to millions – billions of years to us (that's why the earth is a few billion years old!)
2. God is God. (He saw and it was good... So He left the dino's to evolve into the animals we see today!)

Oh yes, and while we're on this topic... Explain how fossils, dino bones, and carbon dating support Creationism. Or is it a HUGE conspiracy by anti-christ organizations!! OH the horror!

Actually, Admin, I'll pray for YOU. As a Christian, I am embarrassed when I see such narrow-mindedness amongst my own kind. Video games (including SPORE, Grand Theft Auto, and what have you) are not one of today's greatest threats to children. Rather, parents who don't teach their kids how to distinguish between [video game] and [real life] are.

If you've brought up your child to believe in Creationism, and also guided him/her in how to distinguish [video game] from [real life], then this game will have no effect on his/her beliefs.

In the mean time, I suggest you get your facts straight about the game as well. The object is not to violently conquer the galaxy by creating demons. One has the option to conquer using violent means or diplomatic means. Having played the game, I'd like to inform you that the easiest way to achieve all of the game's objectives (most notably, exploring the galactic center) is by making peace with the foes of the galaxy, which is ironically similar to the statement "Love thine enemy." Maybe this game isn't so evil after all...

GET A LIFE YOU FOOLS.
IT'S A GAME.
JUST GET OVER IT>
please stop it with the crap.
IF YOU DON'T LIKE IT DON'T BUY IT.
DON'T RUIN IT FOR EVERYONE ELSE.

494. Anon. E. Moosewateron 23 Sep 2008 at 3:16 am 494

As someone of faith with an advanced degree in biologic science, I can say your views, although well-meaning, are misguided. Your disregard that the game evokes Creation at least as much as Darwinism (if not more so) stems from your personal anxieties. Forget theology or biology or any combination of such. The game is an obvious oversimplification of Creation — you just don't like that it disagrees with YOUR oversimplification. By what method exactly do you purport God created the world? Can't you see the exquisite beauty of His creation right before your eyes? Do not profess to have reviewed the sum of evolutionary biology and found it false. It is a gargantuan discipline that some spend their lives exploring, that manifests itself throughout your life... in your urges and hungers, in the immense and ancient battle between a billion of your immune cells and disease. In no way does it preclude Creation — it reveals it more splendidly than ever. Evolution is a 'theory' in the scientific sense that it is testable and falsifiable. It is not opposite of 'fact', nor does it mean 'hunch' as it does in lay speech. Gravity is a 'theory'. There is 'atomic theory' and 'cell theory'... Open your mind — creation is no game.

FUCK YOU>

495. inquisitoron 23 Sep 2008 at 3:59 am 495

Oh man...

1) Spore's objective is not raising a demon alien and kill everyone, as the above poster stated you can be 'friendly' and interact with other races. Is there war on it? yes, there is. It is a civilization simulator. And you, as a defender of christendom, should know better than anyone that in the history of our world there have been hundreds of wars and conquests, many of them motivated by *cough* YOUR *cough* religion. So please try to be consequent.

2) I highly doubt Will Wright's intention when designing the game was to make propaganda for Mr. Darwin and discredit you creationists. Anyway, how can you make such a statement, when it is year 2008? I mean, maybe in the middle age you would have been more successful, but nowadays mostly everyone with half a brain believes more in evolution than magical spontaneous creationism. Evolution needs no one to make propaganda for it nowadays, it is an assumed fact.

3) Anyhow, you find it alarming and inappropriate for your children? Right, just dont buy it, in the same way you wouldnt buy your children porn, or weapons, or wont let them watch this or that TV show. It is your responsibility to raise your kids, not Will Wright's.

Appart from that, I really wonder how you manage to live in the modern world if you react to everything as you did to this harmless little game, which is highly more cultural and creative than it is violent.

So, please, go back to the caves where you belong.

And no, dont pray for me, thank you.

This is sad how people give religions a bad name. Spore is for people to have creativity and the ability to do whatever they want. So am I going to hell because I'm hindu?? And those inappropriate images were USER CREATED. The creators of spore didn't make those things. And if you

528. Orlyon 07 Oct 2008 at 2:08 am 528

Spore is an online game with powerful software that lets users generate a wide variety of figures with a high level of realism. This means that some users can generate offensive content and pass it to others without the consent of Spore, EA, or Will Wright. It's no different than having an older kid pass your son a vulgar drawing to your son at school and blaming the principal or school board for it. Every time your son goes on the internet, he's interacting with an entire world of complete strangers, whether he's playing Spore, visiting his Webkins, or browsing 4Chan.

Spore doesn't teach evolution. Not well anyway. It teaches that you buy points to upgrade your species, and it calls it evolution, but it's not evolution by a long shot. I'd be willing to be that a lot of parents who thought it was going to be educational, especially concerning evolution, were disappointed as well.

I hate to say this, but while evolution offends you, most people simply take it as a fact, either separate from or in conjunction with a set of religious views. Whether you take that as right or wrong, you simply can't expect that other people will feel the same way that you do. Will Wright created a video game loosely based on a concept that a lot of people believe in, and that some people vehemently do not. He wasn't trying to espouse evolution as a belief because to him, it's like trying to convince people that the Earth revolves around the sun. All he did was take something he thought was intuitive and natural and make it into a new character creation program for his video game.

Some games have talking blue hedgehogs, and it's hard for the average person to sympathize with the ire of a minority who have a seemingly arbitrary distinction between what is and isn't acceptable. Certainly, talking animals and magic both seem like they'd be abhorrent to Christian sensibilities, but we've been taking those tired old facets in video games since Battle Toads rode hoverbikes through caverns in the middle of alien planet with walls textured like spaghetti...with sunglasses on.

This may comfort you: no one takes video games seriously.

Sure, Spore uses the word 'evolve,' but it doesn't teach much more than the word itself, and your kid, especially since you're teaching him to believe in creationism, will eventually learn that word. He's going to live in a world where most people see creationism like you see evolution. Now may be the time to have that talk with him.

Small favor: When you do tell him about Evolution, think about how the mom that believes in Evolution teaches her kid about Creationism. Think about how you want her to talk to her kid about her beliefs; with ignorance and derision, or with knowledge and respect?

Instead of railing against one game, I'd suggest working towards raising awareness of parents about the possible dangers the internet may pose to their children. ICRA and iSafe work towards that, but neither one actually seems to be an organization working specifically towards that end. Maybe you can be the mom that spreads the word about the concerns over Shared User Generated Content.

529. Intravenouson 07 Oct 2008 at 6:07 pm 529

This seems a tad extreme to me.

I don't mean to be disrespectful of your religious views, but the fact is that evolution is a valid, and widely accepted theory. I don't feel that you should launch an attack on EA for creating a game based on something which many believe to be true. I understand that you feel you are trying to protect your child, but what exactly is it that you are "protecting" him from? Sooner or later, with or without your approval, he is going to be exposed to ideas which do not necessarily correlate with your own and it is up to him to decide what he feels about them. Is there really any point in trying to narrow your son's mind by disallowing him the opportunity to understand the idea of evolution? Surely you want him to be able to develop his own ideas and reason conflicting views out for himself – and he is not going to learn to do this if you smother him with your own ideas and don't let him have his own.

EA are not using Spore to attack your religion, they are merely creating entertainment through something which is generally accepted as fact. I think perhaps you should think over this again before continuing to harangue EA. After all, if you don't want your son to play it, fine, don't buy it.. but why spoil the fun for the rest of us?

Its people like you that creates all this violence, its narrow minded, hypocritical, people who there all pure and right and just, its people like you that scare monger and make people frightened of the unknown, so what if there is nudity, so what if its saying stuff about evolution, so what, if people what to have a bit of fun and create things fair play, the game is made for a wide audience from children to adults, and somewhere in there, there is bound to be a stupid immature that made this. Its people like you with the same ethos as you, that is openly Racist like the KKK, its people like you that want us to punish people for being gay, you say that "Will Wright brainwashed Frank Drake into thinking that life in the universe gave rise to "super humans" on other planets that are better than us. God would never create something better than himself" if im not mistaken, a human should never think to put him/herself on par with god, well by saying God would never create something better than him, and by say that Will Wright "Brainwashed" him into thinking that there is a super human race, thats in a way saying hat Humans, are like God, im pretty sure thats blasphemous. And watching that film, there is nothing to suggest that Will Wright influenced Frank Drake to make a super human, he said its an idea, a idea that its something that we are not, like eyes in the back of our heads, im sure the people like body guards who get hit across the back of the head may like that, and maybe having four hands may come in handy for somethings, im sure a waiter would like four hands then theres less chance they might smash plates, and you may say that some of the things i said may not be exactly what you said, but you have done the same with "Will Wright Strikes Again" and "Will Wright brainwashes founder of SETI, Frank Drake" you picked out the bits that sound go with your argument and used that, well the only difference with mine is, that mine is close to the truth. Now i can assume that what I say will not change your mind nor any one of the same opinion, but I hope you can read this and see my point of view, because I can see as a good Christian woman, you believe in a set way so to speak and I respect that you believe this, but I don't agree with the way your going about this, and I don't agree that you should be openly spouting creationism, its now established that in schools, teachers no matter what faith they are must teach about creationism, they are allowed to express there opinions about if they think its true or not but the simple fact is that science has uncovered many things they help us today, without science im pretty sure that all this cancer medicine wouldn't be out and available giving people the chance to live just that bit longer, and if I'm correct most churches teach that you try your hardest to sustain your life, and it may of given us bad things as well, but as my mother used to say, " You Have To Take The Rough With The Smooth." I hope you read this and you understand why I wrote this long reply expressing my opinions about not only this part of your website but the rest, and I hope you and others who may agree or disagree, understand why I feel it is necessary to write practically and essay on this subject, I respect you have your beliefs and opinions but understand we have ours and we are not afraid to voice them, as you may know, although I choose to do mine without the swearing, though I was angry at first.

Firstly what annoys me the most is that you are calling science a religion and you feel that it is in direct competition with God. Science has never tried to prove that God exists. There is no part of science that deliberately tries to disprove Christianity. Science just innocently observes the universe that we are in and makes theories about why it is what it is. You christians (and i talk specifically to those who have posted on this site not the entire Christian community) however try to disprove science by quoting the Bible. This is pointless as if i wrote a book and said i created the world and tried to convince others that i am right by quoting this book i would get nowhere so please stop it. And finally it is clear to me that you have never played this game. This game actually SUPPORTS intelligent design as the creatures made in the game are yours, and in most cases that creator is intelligent. The creatures do not adapt by themselves instead the player moves through different stages. From cells (which exist) to animals (which also exist) to tribes (which exist) through to civilisation (which although you may have missed it, exists). So get your son this game he might learn something. He might learn that everything someone does affects the world and their future, he might learn that socialising is important as a creature can by the players control can decide to live peacefully and help other species to thrive. Get him the damn gawe and rather than call Will Wright evil keep your opinions to yourself so i dont have to moan on webpages when i could be making friends on spore.

567. methusalemon 04 Nov 2008 at 5:08 am 567

Think you should just check the facts:

- evolution: 1. the process by which different kinds of living organism are believed to have developed, especially by NATURAL SELECTION. (Compact Oxford English Dictionary)

Doesn't look to me like Spore is about evolution (see natural selection)... If Spore were really about evolution, we would just, hmm, create a cell and sit around watching how it evolves without any possibility to interact (People who think to know about evolution after playing Spore just misunderstood the facts)

- creationism: the belief that the universe and living creatures were created by God in accordance with the account given in the Old Testament.

Well... Let's say God created the universe. That makes Spore still a good game to let your imagination play. (In Spore, there's no word about how the universe and the planet was created... and look: When you play Spore, you are not the only lifeform, there are already millions of them walking around. I wonder where they come from. surely not the player ^__^)

Okay, what I just wanted to say is, that Spore, never...really NEVER, ment to pretend or even simulate evolution, nor it doubts about creationism. I would say it's neutral.

It's the fault of the medias and many uninformed people that Spore is so hated by many people. Also you can't condemn Will Right for what he's done ( I think he's as rational as me and saw what Spore really is about)

And now to Spore Porn...or rather Sporn.

It's a pity that those immature and/or(or not ?) simple minded persons not only create sporn, but even share it with others. (In Spore, you can choose to share the creatures with others, or not). But there are many admins working on banning those creatures as fast as possible, you only have to mark them as inappropriate. I got a good example: me. While I spent my weekend at home, a friend of mine used my Spore account to create a creature with a huge penis... and he shared it (I still don't forgive him ^__^). My account and the creature got banned the very same hour it was shared !!!

You just can't judge the game by it's players .

Phew.....that was all ^^.

No matter what you believe in, you have to stay clear and accurate. It is important to don't create any misunderstandings, which finally leads to hatred. (That also counts for you Fairbear) The clear mind is the greatest gift.

But let me tell you about my creature: the Quans. "This peaceful race lives on the evergreen planet of Gatakai. They have a strong link to nature which makes it almost impossible to for them to lumber trees without feeling pain. They have no belief (yeah...i know...) but rather higher virtues like : honor, respect and forgiveness. Their great aim is to share those virtues and their technology with creatures from other planets to make them grow better and stronger." And by the way, they have never killed a creature that didn't harm them ^^

Just think about it if you want to keep up the blog because actually, you are also misguiding peolpe... think about it...

See, this is what happens when a bitch mother gets access to a computer and the internet. She thinks that a game with evolution is bad because the people who made it are smarter than her. Evolution is a scientific fact, with actual evidence to prove it. Go have a cry and tell someone who cares, like Hitler. He's your friend isn't he?

You have every right to slam this game.. Yes I am being serious.

But what you do NOT have the right to do is attack someone who you have never met.

It is this Nazi style bible beating mentality that caused thousands of children to be tortured and burned alive because of “Satan and possession”... Next you will be protesting and burning copies of the game. I support your right to not like the game But if you cannot make at least a single intelligent comment without reverting to you cults handbook... then you should probably just drop it..

And yes this is more then likely embarrassing the hell out of your kid....

Way to go mom...

Thank you for your time

There's people dying of hunger and thirst, childrens being violated, people being murderer, and you create a website against SPORE... What makes you hate it so much? I mean, its just a game. Does your God have nothing better to worry about? Dont you have nothing better to fight for?

I have LOTS of things to say about “””””religious””””” people like you. But I think its wothless, I'm sure that you wont read this. And if you read this, you wont think about it because your beliefs are SO strongly stupid that you'll think that everyone except you is wrong, and I can tell you this because I've read lots of things like that in this website.

If you dont like the game, hey! just dont play it for God sake!! dont make a website saying “God doesnt want this game” because you're not God ok? If God doesnt like it, let Him say it.

PD: I guess it was funny to search for all those “freaky” videos of SPORE (yeah, those about porn and that stuff) did you enjoy it?? I guess you did.....

PLEASE, EMAIL ME IF YOU HAVE READ THIS

“The object of the game is to evolve from a “spore” into demon-like intelligent space creatures that violently take over the galaxy.” You may take your creature in that way, but you may go to another way. You may just evolve from a spore to a cute and funny intelligent space creatures that peacefully take over the galaxy.

Dear Admin as it is your belief to not believe in creationism that ok, but to tell others that what they believe in is wrong means were not getting far away from the past are we. Till you realize that even your children have individual thought, you will not stop to spread an idea that is so old and outdated even your own Minister might doubt his own beliefs. You need to realize that you hold your own bible for your own comfort and not to know the god behind those pages. If you can let it(creationism) in your mind you can also realize that their is more to the bible than what is written on pages. You must find it in your heart to let people believe in what they want and believe in what you want. Stop being such a hypocrite. Jesus doesn't like hypocrites as it reads in the bible

591. ERrnesSTon 03 Dec 2008 at 2:01 am 591

Those who are stubborn convert the cat, and those who are real convert themselves. Yes I made that up, but It gets the point across(If you understand it, many people dont understand me at all-Part of the charm of being me and not a copy of you).

592. ERrnesSTon 03 Dec 2008 at 2:41 am 592

also, you need to get closer to god, study other religions, and if you become more empowered to believe in your own religion you have succeeded. However, unless you take your time to read every single book ever written you will never have true faith in your own religion. Which comes from like I said reading about every other religion.

594. ERrnesSTon 10 Dec 2008 at 4:19 pm 594

Dude, I know what happens when people do this. It actually has a negative affect, and this time towards your religion. Will you sacrifice your own church and god for your own selfish beliefs. Maybe god created earth in his days and not ours, maybe animals appeared to him as if they appeared out of nowhere, but to us they slowly developed because our times are so different. If you where to allow the meanings in the bible to not be literall, but implied, there would be a difference in how you interpret it. I like so few can look at a book(even the bible) and see past the pages. You like so many look at the bible and interpret it your own selfish way through the manipulation of its words. The church seperates and becomes weak. You cannot truly be apart of the Church of Jesus Christ because you like so many others have created their own selfish meanings to the Bible. Yes there is an actual church called the Church of Jesus Christ of... they have also sinned. There is only one true Church, but many have seperated and become unholy versions of the true church. Only those who call themselves Christians, Catholic, and Mormons will be punished for this sin. The true objective of the Bible was spiritual coexistence with humanity, only the Buddist monks have achieved this(another religion and not yours) so they will be spared from punishment from the one you consider so devine in nature you have to corrupt his words to gain followers. You must ask yourself this question-Why do many religions only hold one true god, and many sub-gods(or to you angles).

hello. im not here to bash you,troll,or any other thing which requires the use of angry vocabulary. im here to speak my mind on this subject. i found this website on my school computers while trying to get on thespore website (wich is blocked under the tab “games”) and i saw “antispore.com” so i hopped in to check it out. i checked out your posts and the pictures you added. yes. one is inappropriate,not EA's fault. yes,the game is set around the idea of creating a species,evolving it, and somehow taking over the galaxy.no you dont just have to destroy and kill. if you actually played the game, in the begining you get a “cell”. it can be a carnivore or a herbivore. depending on that you come out as a herbivor,omnivore,or carnivore. at that point you interact with other species. you can be kind or mean. then you evolve in thought. you move to the tribal stage. same situation, nice or mean. then to civilization and then space. depending on your set of accomplishments you get a special character type, aka zealot,warrior,knight,ecologist,scientist, etc. you can then destroy, purchase, or convert the galaxy making it one with itself. ofcourse the main plot is to det to the center of the galaxy thus gaining 42.(dont ask).

the pictures you posted are just creations. the first one was made by a user who is both perverted and idiotic. some of us other people tho,me included (search OMGIMBOB on spore.com/sporepedia to see my stuff ^~^ create stuff so we can share them,socialize,and simply have fun. as others have said,with the clay,crayola,and paper its the person who creates the thing whom causes the sin not the person or people who created the outlet for said sin. do not blame will wright. he is not evil. blame the creators. thank you for your time and have a VERY merry christmas (posted dec. 19th 2008)

I for one think you are taking things out of hand. it is a great game that has evolution in it. it was designed for kids or the kid ranged age. it is very cartoony specially for the cut scenes. it is also very harmless.How old is your kid? i bet he cant even comprehend evolution completely. to him all he would know is this game. which is fake. and you do not violently make your way to the top...you use strategy and skill. you may fight others along your way but if you look at it that's how humanity is. you cant change it, you can hope it changes but i doubt it ever will. i think you should loosen up. its not so much of a big deal.

Spore is a great game, I play it too. It develops kid's creativity and possibly imagination. I can't believe that someone is wasting his/her precious time whining. If you have something to complain about, write email to EA. It's not EAs fault if some players have made creatures which look inappropriate.(Like OMGIMBOB said)
Spore isn't all about conquering the galaxy and killing all creatures you can find. You can make alliances with other kingdoms, fight with them against creatures that don't understand relationships ( I mean the Grox ;D )
You can set trade routes with other races and trade resources. You CAN conquer the galaxy IF YOU WANT, make new friends across galaxy, help them or just explore the galaxy. The whole game is fictional. PERIOD.

First thing Will Wright worked 8 years on this game and the first thing people do is jump on it as blasphmy and second thing spore is fictional even about evelutionary wise. Example: You can put a mouth on a creature that will what so ever not help the creature in any way evelutionary wise the never happens because there would be no purpose or reasoning for that. Second thing you can never go excint in that game if you die you just pop out of your egg agian its unrealistic. Personally i do believe in evolution but i made my mind up long before i got spore. Also you should have more influnce on your child than a game should, if you don't i would be very sad day for your family.

What I think is funny is the fact that there is an ad on this website for Spore. Funnest game ever!

Hey, people. Just because someone says something stupid and acts all extremist-like doesnt mean you have to go about dissing their beliefs. It's cruel and you arent going to make a point by INSULTING them. You just make them angry. Now, someone with a mindset like this most likely reflects the subconscious belief- and this is SUBCONSCIOUS, so dont get after me about how I'm wrong and you're good and whatnot- the subconscious belief that all humans are fundamentally evil. That their good is the only good, and all who do not believe in it are wrong and going to hell. In the eyes of admin, all of us who oppose their statements are basically one big voice of someone who is misguided and unenlightened and incorrect.

When admin reads these comments, their mind will find every little mistake in what we say and disregard our statements as trash.

Please, people! Just because you will never meet this person you should not taunt them or swear at them, especially if you want to prove a point! You're just as bad as admin! But on the opposite side! With more grammatical errors!

Now, this is what I believe. You don't have to, I just want you all to think about what I have to say.

Good and evil are words, not nouns.

People will always disagree, but no one will ever be proven right.

All we can do is listen to each other and love each other, not for our many faults but for our kindness and compassion for everyone, no matter how different their beliefs or lifestyles are.

There is a god

But God did not write the bible, a bunch of monks did ten thousand years ago.

And that was after the stories inside it had been passed down orally for generations of illiteracy. Who really knows what is true inside it?

Also, the first stories in the bible, like adam and eve, came from a time when people taught children through proverbs and stories. The garden of Eden may have been a metaphorical garden. Not a real thing.

People are fundamentally good, but we are all terribly confused.

Humans evolved from apes, who evolved from fish, who started out as algae.

Now, one thing I have to say to admin: You have never played Spore, and if you have, you played it to find faults in it. Stop trying to prove people wrong. Stop looking for fault in the actions and words of others. Believe what you feel is true, not what people tell you. Think open-mindedly, try to see things from different points of view, and love everyone for who they are, don't discourage them for who they aren't.

And the same goes for all you people who commented for the sake of destroying admin's beliefs. You say you are open-minded; you are not. You cannot be open-minded until you know who you are and why, and until you understand who your opponents are and where they are coming from. Most of you believe as strictly as admin does, but just in different principles.

Goodness, I feel like a teacher or a mother or an old wise turtle. I'm not, I'm twelve years old. It's sort of sad, actually.

621. Lost Fan! Locke is dead! NOOOOO! on 18 Jun 2009 at 1:33 pm 621

Admin, why are you doing this? All you're doing is making people angry. And anyway, you don't have to be all war-like or anything. You can make friends instead of foes, or eat plants instead of other animals. You can even eat fish instead of creatures if it's too late to become an herbivore! Don't blame EA for the option to not play nice. And don't blame your kid for being corrupt, either. (although you probably wouldn't 'cause I don't think you're THAT stupid)

622. ricardoon 23 Jun 2009 at 6:41 pm 622

Why are people still worshipping me? I'm constantly dishing out crap to all you poor saps on earth & you still bow down!?!?! Get a spine and stand up to me . . . or do you enjoy the fact that I kill innocent people just to test your faith?

Didn't you learn a lesson from what I did to Adam? He had the balls to question me but instead of disussing the situation like an adult I just punished him and his children and his childrens children throughout eternity. Does that not make you think? I gave you all brains, how about using them? Are you really so stupid that you will follow blindly?

To be honest I was hoping you would all grow see me for what I am . . . The guy that created me played the same game. When I finally stood up to him and said: "Hey. . . why do you expect to be worshiped? If I created living beings I would want them to be my equals. . . its pretty pathetic expecting me to worship you" he said: "congratulations, you have passed the test. . . go into the multiverse and propogate". And so I did.

I am so disapointed that you can't see the truth, shame I have to spell it out for you. Anyone that stands up to me will get into heaven . . . all you other mindless retards deserve to spend eternity in hell . . . THE REAL EVIL IS NOT THINKING FOR YOURSELF.

Umm, wow. I think you're taking this videogame a little too seriously. And by the way, evolution has been proven. And you say it was the hand of god that created everything, not science. First of all, I'm pretty sure you weren't there so you can't be so sure. Second, I'm pretty sure you've never seen god so for all you know science could be the work of god. Honestly, it's fine that you don't like this game, but that doesn't mean we should all be forced to follow what you believe in, so if you don't like it just don't buy it.

The admin is a retarded. Creationism is a lie. Sure, evolution is a theory, but yet creatures have actually evolved. The scientific proof is undeniable. Furthermore, i do not understand why does evolutionism clash with creationism. What if god started the universe, and let it unfold? So you are quite closed minded, admin. In conclusion, the admin is either an awesome troll or sadly, an idiot. You are nothing but a brainwashed sheep. You are the very definition of failure.

Also, for the record, i never played spore, so i do not know if it is entertaining or not. But i really hate censorship sorry man but i have to disagree with you what you do in the game is entirely up to yours to decide you can both create a fiendish creature or a cute charismatic creature in the game and also you can socialize with the others creatures or really slaughter them. and just to you remember the bible was written ages ago with separated books but the pope choose what books would come in or out in the current version so you cannot believe everything is exactly how it's being told.

640. Spore Creacioniston 24 Feb 2010 at 12:04 am 640

EA is a company that makes games for people to enjoy. Spore is a whole community which has nice people and bad people, just like people in your street, the creature they make depends ENTIRELY on THEMSELVES. I myself is a christian, and i love spore. It may be hard to think about for ur puny under-grown brain (which thinks SPORE is crap)(no offense) but maybe, just possibly, probably, God made a creature(just like a cell) and made it evolve, made all the right temperatures, things and all to help it evolve into what might be a dog, a monkey or maybe us. (sorry for the long sentence)
So yea!

Sincerely,
SporeWarrior

Admin have you let your son play Spore? I know that their are a lot of haters on the web bashing the game and god on this site but a lot off people are making good points. This site has been going on 2 years. Sure some people out their are pervs but that's the internet for you. Someone always has to take something fun and ruin it for us all. As for the "DEMON" looking one i don't see why you hate it so much kids (boys) like monsters and its not like it has to be evil. You control whether or not you want your civ. to be Nice and make peace or destroy your enemy. As for it challenging religion its just a game. I'm not going to forget my religion just because some make-believe game. Plus like most people said its kind of like Creationism after all your in control. Plus if the other peoples creations bother you that much then just don't let your kid sign up for the EA site or watch what he puts on it. Or if you have faith trust that your kid knows the difference from reality and a fictional game.

On a completely different note for all those on the site saying their is know proof of God well it has been proven that it take more faith to believe in evolution then it does in God. Their is proof for evolution in the sense that a creature adapts in changes over time but no evidence in the least bit that one species changed into another like fish to rat or whatever they say it is. Oh and for all those that will say im afraid of my religion being proven wrong im sorry on how lost you must be. Ow and for those of you who don't like Church goers by a bible read it and if you believe in it but still don't like fanatics the do volunteer work instead. After all what do you think God wants us to relay do site in a church all Sunday saying we are Christians when we don't care about others or do what Jesus and love your neighbor.

Yeah..... you know its really sad... EVERYONE in here is acting like a little bitch. to think this guy could have an opinion, and have all of this useless bullshit come back at him. Thats really fucking sad. and no im taking no sides here. It just seems like we should all come together and rid this world of thu fucking smut MTV as so abundently plagued us with... if you think about it MTV is directly the cause of all problems we have today. Because it is brainwashing the children to grow up i have no fucking clue how to get the fucking conseptts required for life. whatever everyone just fuck off EVERYONE FUCK OFF!!!! FUCK YOU. and if you really feel the need to continue ranting on this random pice of shit i really hope you get paid or something. because your fucking useless

I guess the admin doesn't know. He's just bad informed. Just saw a little piece of a great whole. And because of this little knowledge Admin thinks he can judge about it.
Yeah. That's the situation.

If Admin would have gathered some more information he'd know that you can easily win the game WITHOUT ARMING ANOTHER CREATURE!

Maybe Mr.-Very-Clever-Admin should play that game, and THEN JUDGE about it, before Saying 'Bla bla bla' and don't know what he's talking about!

648. Glennon 27 Jul 2010 at 4:56 pm 648

Dude, you choose what to be. you can be completely nice in the game and befriend everyone, or be a warrior and destroy everything, be a trader and make tons of money, or be a "Zealot" and spread your beliefs throughout the world/galaxy. The possibilities are practically endless. You do NOT just kill everything in your path, you do that in EA's new game, BattleSpore (designed for the people that desire to kill, destroy, and pirate).

As for the evolution thing, many Christians understand that it is FICTION!

If you seriously won't let your son play... I don't know... Mario, because you're afraid he'll start punching holes in the roof and kicking turtle shells around, then I pity your son and am embarrassed for you.

Next time, you should actually do some research before posting a blog and embarrassing yourself.

-Glenn

If I had authority to do so, erase this website and would not let even a single letter of that stupidly post. Know that I love spore, and now I have it minimized by the way, Will Wright's is an authentic genius. Incidentally, this is gonna hurt, but the evolution is fully demonstrated. By the way, what drugs you take before you write? is that I want to try. And stop praying for me, because I am a practicing Christian. And yet I like spore.

And if you have courage, answer me.

joder no tenies nada mejor ke hacer ke meteros con spore meteos con vuestros putos asuntos biblicos protesanes de la gran %%% tocachuevos de mierda ni si quiera sabeis hablar bien español no sabies relacionar palabras so idiotas y estamos en el siglo 21 no en el 15 para abajo y como podeis creer ke lo ke se supone ke creo dios solio cagado del suelo buff os odio. Viva españa.

653. Niraon 12 Dec 2010 at 2:58 am 653

You poor pathetic shit... The monsters themselves ain't real, don't that makes you(r child) thinks that evolution ain't real too?

Where do you live anyways, in a cave?

I'm not going to bash God. I'm a religious person, anyways. And the others, don't bash God and religion too. They are innocent. The one who is crazy is the ass-minded ape that made this site.

654. Stick Ninjaon 12 Dec 2010 at 9:06 pm 654

Hey dude I'm only 11 yrs. old and I know you're wrong. see everyone knows that evolution is fake i agree but adaptation isn't and they say creatures evolve by them selves well guess what I think that maxis proved a good point your creature needs a human to evolve them they don't do it themselves.

Admin ur a friggin idiot I play this game with my mom and dad every day and everybody i know that has played it they dont seem to see anything wrong

658. Anonymouson 03 Jan 2011 at 4:26 pm 658

I believe in the same faiths you believe in Admin. I play Spore just for fun. I do believe that Alien Civilisations are possible. I still do believe God created the earth in His image. I know that you want to spread your beliefs, but games are meant to be fun, they aren't really meant to brainwash people. Believing in something is OK. But forcing people to believe in it is not OK. By doing what you're doing on this website, you're becoming almost exactly like what you stand against. I have no intention to insult you, but I suggest that you leave us be and let whoever believe in whatever. Who cares what they believe in? What only matters to you is what you believe in.

659. concerned dudeon 04 Jan 2011 at 1:00 pm 659

hey im christian and all but seriously I LOVE SPORE! and ur nuts if u can just diregard it as a terrible game... so i think ur a retard and YOUR the one killing kids child hoods and "god" doesnt take that lightly so go to heck 😊

LOLOLOLOLOLOL STUPID BIBLE HUMPER ITS JUST A GAME!

661. Jadeon 10 Jan 2011 at 2:23 pm 661

if you don't like your kid playing this, don't let him, but PLEASE don't make stupid idiotic blogggs like this, spore is a game where you make your own race, you don't have to violently take over galaxy's. you can discuss with the owners of the planet and they might give it to you or incase not, you can buy it. whats the big deal?!

662. asdaon 25 Jan 2011 at 12:29 pm 662

fuck you

663. Shannonon 27 Mar 2011 at 7:20 pm 663

I'm sorry but I have to disagree with you completely on your theory that spore is promoting evolution. Spore is a simple fun game for children to have fun on and use their imaginations to create creatures. Yes, some users may take advantage of that, and create inappropriate things, but I DO NOT believe spore is deliberately PROMOTING evolution. So what? The game involves evolution. I don't think that gives you the right to accuse them of the things people may do in real life. I think you may be over-reacting a bit about this.

664. monkon 12 Apr 2011 at 12:43 pm 664 look im buddist and I belive in peace and humanity for all I have gone to temple every day for the last 5 years and I play spore but even I have gotten tried of the parden my french god damm bible thumpers who belive that to spred their belifs they have to go dor to door compalin and piss people off just to belive in their own god Im not picking at any particalr religin but the one who have uncreative names for there god are the biggest douce bags and as for taking your childs creativty away you are the worst parent ever by far all your doing is raising something with no soul you mother fucking bitch

if you think, what the humans wants? we want to expand our terrtorie, that means to buy contries. in the future the hole Earth will be 1 country or will be extinct. so think now we are thinking on life on mars, then we will think on expanding on mars then in expanding to another solar sistem. think in that

667. bobon 24 May 2011 at 9:07 pm 667

I'm christian for Gods sake and this is retarded. Its a friggen game! Its not going to poison someone! Now go fuck off you fag

668. Comprehensiveon 28 May 2011 at 11:30 pm 668

As a christian, I can still say this "admin" is a complete disgrace to the religion. It's idiots like him who set up terrible stereotypes and make everyone who believes look like an idiot. Evolution is something I completely accept as well. Is it not possible that god used evolution as a method of creating everything? That being said, evolution is still only a theory, but a bloody good one. There isn't sufficient evidence to 'prove' it, but it's good nonetheless.

669. matthew goodallon 15 Jun 2011 at 11:53 am 669

just found this site a few years after all the hype and can i say. your arguement doesnt sway.

So if this game should have an age rating because of evolution then shouldn't the bible or is this just another one sided argument of the lord our god.

and as for violence do i need to mention the billions of people died in the past all for religion. You gotta think, a game that lets you make your own creature which turn into little people to do whatever you want them to, or a book that promotes violence bigotry hate and stupid people like you.

After all the world is only 4000 years old and all those stars were painted on the sky just for us to have something to look at in the night

IT IS EXACTLY THE SAME THING TEACHING EVOLUTION AS CHRISTIANITY, and they aren't teaching evolution they are making a nice game! You know how pissed of I gone when I red this blog? Almost as pissed of as a extreme christian! WAKE UP! YOU CAN STILL BE
