

Claude Lévi-Strauss, probably the most famous anthropologist in the history of the field, died last Friday. We celebrated his 100th birthday here almost a year ago and concluded: "If the study of the mind and that of culture become unified in a naturalistic framework, then Lévi-Strauss will stand out as a precursor of this new adventure."