

On July 7th 2009, the The London Evolutionary Research Network held a extremely interesting debate on group selection in which four eminent speakers in the field discussed the motion: "Is natural selection at the group level an important evolutionary force?"

Stuart West, Professor of Evolutionary Biology, University of Oxford

Herbert Gintis, Professor of Economics, Santa Fe Intitute, University of Siena, and CEU

Samir Okasha, Professor of Philosophy of Science, University of Bristol

Mark Pagel, Professor of Biology, University of Reading

After many months of waiting, the videos have finally been uploaded online. You can now watch the debate videos here.