

The Society for Anthropological Sciences (SAS / SASci) will be holding its 10th annual meeting from March 18 - 22, 2014, in Albuquerque, New Mexico. We invite scholars from any subdiscipline of anthropology, or from allied social sciences, to submit abstracts for papers, posters, or full sessions on any topic in anthropological science, broadly conceived. Deadline: October 15. The Society for Anthropological Sciences, as both an independent organization (SaSci) and a section of the American Anthropological Association (SAS), promotes the scientific understanding of humanity through comparative, cognitive, quantitative, and evolutionary approaches. The Society seeks to fulfill the historic mission of anthropology to describe and explain the range of variation in human biology, society, and culture across time and space.

You may join SAS through the AAA website as a section along with your membership, or if you are not a member of the AAA, visit <http://anthrosciences.org/csac/signup.xsp> to join SaSci for $10 / year. This year the Society will be a co-sponsoring organization in conjunction with the annual meeting of the Society for Applied Anthropology (SfAA). SAS/SaSci allots 30 minutes including discussion for each oral presentation. Registration for the conference must be done through the SfAA site athttps://www.sfaa.net/sfaa2014/2014instruct.html , and includes access to all activities at the conference.
